PARIS, JAN. 17.

The dispute of several days, between the political friends of the late M. Gambetta and the poor old father, who decided on having his son's remains interred in the family vault, at Nice, was terminated at last, by the sending of the coffin, by a special train, to the city of flowers, on Friday last.

This mortuary train, consisting of a baggage waggon, elegantly fitted up as a funeral car (being entirely hung and lined with black and silver), a couple of saloon carriages, and two first-class carriages for the members of the press, and a couple of waggons for conveying the wreaths, arrived in Nice at 8 o'clock on Saturday morning, having been received by deputations bringing wreaths of flowers, at the four or five points at which it had stopped for a few minutes on the way down. It had been intended to allow speeches to be delivered at the various stopping points on the way; but the delays thus occasioned would have retarded the arrival of the body; and as Nice had been ready for several days, with all its preparations for giving a splendid interment to the remains of the late tribune, and the floral decorations were fading, it was wisely determined to suppress that part of the provincial programme.

On reaching Nice, the coffin, wrapped round with tri-coloured flags, and literally hidden under the masses of garlands and greenery prepared for the occasion, was placed in a chapelle ardente prepared for its reception at the railway station, where a large hall had been fitted up with all the taste and splendour of which such an arrangement is susceptible, the walls being hung with black cloth, striped with silver, and ornamented with the initials of the deceased in the same metal. Masses of beautiful shrubbery and flowers were tastefully disposed round the hall, with the tricolour flag, veiled in crape, producing, say the spectators of the scene, a very striking and artistic effect.

The coffin and its accompanying guardians were received by the Mayor and the local authorities, and the firing of cannon at short intervals announced to the town that the remains of Leon Gambetta had arrived. The whole town had been on the qui vive since the preceding day, when placards had been put up informing the Niçois that the coffin was en route; and a great concourse of people at once flocked to the station to pay a last tribute of respect or of curiosity to the memory of the late statesman. The visitors entered in a continuous stream defiling before the catafalque, and passing out by an opposite door. The whole passed off with the utmost quiet and decorum.

While this visit was taking place, the procession was formed outside. A great number of deputations had arrived the preceding day from the neighbouring communes, and all the political, artistic, commercial, scholastic, and charitable institutions, societies, clubs, &c., of the town, had turned out en masse, all carrying wreaths and garlands to lay on the grave, and tricolour flags covered with crape. Nearly all the houses along the line of march were hung with black, or showed the Republican flag veiled with crape. The street lamps were lighted and veiled in crape. A dense crowd lined the streets, which were kept by lines of soldiers and police. Every window and balcony was crowded with spectators, and even the roofs of many of the houses were covered with spectators.

The most remarkable of the garlands that had figured at the Paris obsequies had been sent to Nice with the coffin, filling, as remarked above, two luggage vans. An enormous quantity of these floral tokens had been prepared in the various localities represented by delegations, for the entire region known as "the Littoral," and of which Nice may be regarded as the metropolis, is a vast flower bed, and can contribute any amount of blossoms on any given occasion. And as Nice and its near neighbours are generally suspected by the rest of France of nursing a secret desire to regain their former Italian nationality, their people naturally seized on the opportunity afforded by the obsequies of "the great patriot" to make a manifestation that would appear at all events to imply their enthusiastic attachment to France and their claim to be considered as Frenchmen.

The Mediterranean squadron had come to the neighbouring Bay of Villefranche the day before the funeral, and the sailors formed part of the long and imposing procession which conveyed the coffin to the cemetery on the summit of the picturesque Chateau Hill.

M. Gambetta, sen., whose grief was painful to witness, walked immediately behind the splendid funeral chariot that had been prepared expressly for the occasion. He was accompanied by his son-in-law and nephew, but is reported as having received very coldly the group of intimate friends of his son, who had tortured him with their persistence in demanding to retain the body in Paris.

The funeral, though conducted without any immixtion of priests or ecclesiastical rites, was followed by all the Catholic societies of the town. It was generally supposed that the aged father would have preferred a religious funeral, and moreover, the honours paid to the Gambetta being rendered to him rather as a patriot than as a statesman, everybody seems to have concurred in the desire to employ the opportunity for emphasising his attachment to the French name and nationality.

It appears clear that Gambetta desired to be buried in Nice, where he had a handsome monument erected some two years ago, in the cemetery of the Chateau-hill, to the memory of his mother and his aunt, Mademoiselle Massabee, who was his most devoted friend and second mother. When his father gently reproached him for the costliness of this monument, and remarked that he should probably not be long in taking his place in it, and that a simple stone would have been enough for him, his son replied that it would be the burial place of all their family, and adding "and mine also."

Madame Adam, the intimate friend of Leon Gambetta and his family, has declared to all concerned that the late statesman had repeatedly stated to her that he desired to be buried beside his mother and his aunt. It is evident, therefore, that M. Gambetta, in insisting on the interment taking place at Nice, has carried out, as he claimed to be doing, the intentions of his son as well as the gratification of his own desire—"to keep the grave of his son covered with flowers from his garden."

M. Gambetta, it is said, speaks very bitterly of the cruelty of the medical attendants of his son in keeping him in ignorance of the real situation of the latter.

"I, his father, had a right to be told the truth," he repeats to those about him. "Had I not been deceived by the false bulletins and false assurances of his recovery I should have been with him through his illness, and have had, at least, the consolation of receiving his last adieu."

The mystery maintained, and the falsehood so perseveringly promulgated, throughout the illness of the late popular leader, having deprived the statements of his physicians of all weight with the public, it is generally believed that the truth regarding the wound in the hand, and the fatal malady which followed it, is not yet known, and perhaps never will be.

It is quite certain that a lady, whose arrival had been announced by telegram, arrived at the Jardies about 5 p.m. on the day of the accident, which occurred about an hour later; that a scene of great violence took place between Leon Gambetta and his visitor, and that this scene was only ended by the shot in the hand which it has been sought to represent as an accident caused by M. Gambatta's own clumsiness, and suspected to have been the work of an angry woman roused to desperation by the betrayal of a troth of many years' standing. But, another, and on the whole, a more plausible explanation, attributes the infliction of the wound to a hasty movement designed to dash aside the arm which the visitor, despairing of her errand, had directed against herself; which movement, the trigger being drawn, resulted in M. Gambetta's receiving, in his own person, the ball which his visitor had intended for herself.

If this explanation be correct, it is evident that M. Gambetta would exert his utmost authority to compel his friends to keep the secret of the affair, both as a matter of justice to the unhappy lady who had been the innocent cause of his accident, and also for the sake of his own reputation and in the interest of the marriage of ambition, which he had determined to contract. That the mysterious visitor had a powerful hold on the wounded man is proved by the fact that she did not leave the house until all was over, having kept devoted watch at the sufferer's pillow through 32 days and nights, without having lain down for a single moment through the whole of that time.

The country house, purchased by the late statesman, at Ville d'Avray, stands alone in a garden of no great extent. Some months ago, wishing to enlarge this garden, he bought the adjoining property, Les Jardies, formerly the favourite retreat of the renowned romance writer, Balzac. Gambetta's intention was to throw down the walls between the two properties, which would thus have formed but one. Balzac spent, or rather wasted, vast sums of money on the house, ill-constructed, and which never could have been made into an agreeable residence; and its new owner consequently intended to pull it down, and had begun the work of destruction by removing a medallion of Balzac that had been placed over the door. This irreverent indifference of the new owner to the interest attaching to Les Jardies as associated with the memory of the author of "Le Cousin Pons," "Le Lys dans la Vallee," "Le Medecin de Campagne," and so many other chefs d'oeuvres of metaphysical observation and circumstantial imagination, was greatly resented by the non-admirers of the "Great Tribune," who, after his acquisition of the Jardies, applied that appellation to his own residence thus augmented.

The sudden disappearance of the impetuous ambitious leader who had occupied for a dozen years so conspicuous a place in the eyes of France and of Europe must necessarily modify the progress of events in this country and beyond its borders. But it is impossible to foresee the nature or the extent of the changes that must follow this disappearance. Neither the friends nor the foes of the defunct could throw any light on this question, which can only be answered by the sequence of coming events themselves. As yet no man of sufficient mark to take the place thus left vacant has appeared in the ranks of the dominant party. The Republicans are profoundly divided, as is proved by the general appeals to union and conciliation; appeals which each fraction is addressing to all the others, each party desiring to bring the others to its own views and formula.

The Imperialists, on their side, are bestirring themselves, and anticipating a "good time coming" for their young candidate, Prince Victor. And the Royalists, equally desirous to turn the disappearance of their archenemy to account, are busy getting up banquets and making speeches that announce the speedy "salvation" of France by the return of her "King," but without apparently any plan, programme, or ground on which to re-establish the state of things which they declare to be the natural destiny of their country.

Quiet money-saving M. Grevy has determined to give two balls this winter, but the "gaieties of the season," so important a source of prosperity for the trades of Paris, must evidently look for the desired impetus elsewhere than to the Palace of the Elysee.

JAN. 24.

The absurdity of Prince Napoleon's manifesto is too obvious to call for comment, but the violence of the anger it has excited in the Chamber is no less ridiculous. The Prince has always been unpopular, as much or even more so among the Imperialists as among the Legitimists and the Republicans. The Government could well have afforded to laugh at his claim to resume in his own person the Napoleonic tradition and prospects; but the real cause of the anger so loudly manifested in the governing regions must be sought for in the Prince's demand for the "appeal to the people," which, as he remarks, has come to be received by the French people as the basis and source of right for the government of France. The majority of the French people desire peace, quiet, stability, and material prosperity; and the Republican form, being established and in possession of the supreme power, is tolerably sure to be accepted or acquiesced in by that majority, as long as it succeeds in keeping the country quiet. It is, nevertheless, true that the Republican form of government was decided upon by the Constituent Assembly of 1871 by a majority of one vote only, and that it has hitherto been maintained rather by the reciprocal jealousies of its enemies than by any clear and decided preference of the population at large. And it is probably equally true that the men now in power are by no means sufficiently sure of the hold of the Republicans on the sympathies of the country to feel any confidence in the result of such a plebiscite as Prince Napoleon demands, on the ground that the empire having been established by the votes of overwhelming majorities of the French electors can only be legally supplanted by a new plebiscite. But it is just this general appeal to the totality of the French voting population which constitutes the sting of Prince Napoleon's manifesto.

The Liberal portion of the Republican party is as much alarmed as are the Imperialists and the Legitimists at the tendency of the legislative measures so angrily proposed in the Chambers, by way of protecting the Republican form of government by driving from France the descendants of the families that have reigned in this country. It is felt that to deprive those descendants of the pleasure of breathing their native air and of living in their native country, as long as they submit quietly to the established regime, is not only both ungenerous and unjust, but is also the establishment of a precedent and a policy that may become dangerous to all other classes of Frenchmen. Having passed so many years of their life in conspiring, more or less overtly, against the Governments that preceded the present Republic, it is natural that those who look beyond the present moment should scarcely be anxious to forge weapons which, should a new overturning occur, might, and probably would be turned against themselves.

The Princess Clotilda, though living apart from her husband (whose anti-Catholic sentiments preclude anything like sympathy between him and the devout Catholic whom the political necessities of his cousin made his wife), lost not a day in coming to his side on learning his arrest and imprisonment. She, of all the other surviving actors and actresses in the wonderful phantasmagoric drama of the Second Empire, is changed almost beyond recognition. She was never really pretty, even when, not sixteen, she came as a bride to the Palais-Royal, but her fair complexion and beautiful light hair, with fine eyes and a charming smile, made up a personal appearance decidedly pleasing, and her manners, at once dignified and kindly, enhanced the favourable impression produced by her youth and her air of truthfulness and candour. She is now almost as pale and sallow as the ex-Empress; like her, she wears only the plainest and most lugubrious of black gowns and bonnets, and her pretty hair, of pale gold in other days, is as white as snow. She has only been allowed, like Prince Victor and Princess Mathilde, to see the prisoner at the Conciergerie for a short time each day; in fact, the excess of precautions observed in the safe keeping of Prince Napoleon, who has probably no thought of attempting an evasion, appears as absurd as the rest of the affair, the prisoner's own action included.

That the terrors of the governing party are not shared by the people generally would seem to be shown by the incident which occurred, a few nights since, at Sarah Bernhardt's theatre, the Vaudeville, where "Fedora," Victor Sardou's new play, is being given, with the capricious, but highly-gifted, Sarah in the title part. At the passage, "There has lately been some question in the Chamber of the expulsion of a Russian domiciled in Paris. There has been a good deal of talk. . . . The law has been voted. . . . Ultimately, nothing was done!" loud laughter, followed by applause, burst from the audience, laughter and applause which became a perfect tumult at the subsequent passage, "And he cannot be expelled unless he disturbs public order—which is not very likely, as you will admit!"

The preparations for the Exhibition at Amsterdam are going on with much spirit, and the coming show will evidently, like its predecessors, be worth a visit. Portugal is equally busy getting up an agricultural exhibition, to be held next May, in Lisbon, remaining open two months and including alimentary products, agricultural implements and machinery, and manures. The railways of the little kingdom (so anxious not to be united with Spain) are making very liberal arrangements for the conveying of goods for the Exhibition at half, or less, of the usual rates.

The town of Nice (of all places in the world the one which ought most anxiously to keep itself clear of such gatherings, useful but too prosaic for the lovers of sunshine, flowers, and the dolce far niente) is also preparing to have an International Exhibition in 1884.

An Exhibition of a different kind has been opened in Vienna, consisting of upwards of a hundred Gobelins from Schoenbrunn and other Austrian palaces. This splendid show is due to the liberality of the Emperor, and the proceeds are for the benefit of the sufferers by the recent terrible inundations in the Tyrol. The largest of these tapestries is that after the famous cartoon of "King Charles the Fifth's Warriors before Carthage." There are 10 Gobelins after Rubens, six after Jordaens, 10 after Raphael, which latter rival those of the Vatican. Many pieces in this gorgeous display rival those in the Vatican. Most of them were made in the 15th century at Brussels or Paris, and are only equalled by those in Rome and in Madrid.

A similar Exhibition has been opened in this city, by the spirited owners of the great drapery establishment of the Louvre, who have collected its elements from old castles and historic houses in France, Spain, and Italy. The splendid productions of ancient looms are intact and in perfect condition; they represent landscapes, country scenes, mythological and military episodes, &c., and may be used not only as artistic wall-coverings, but as window and door curtains and studio draperies; their size varies from two to six metres in length, and from three to four metres in height, and every one of them is "a thing of beauty" and a wonder in its way.

Balls and parties are going on merrily, clubs, syndicates, societies of all kinds rivalling, and sometimes surpassing, private displays in the getting up of dances, promenades, and other social gatherings.

Those wonderful little creatures "The Royal American Midgets," "General Mite" and "Miss Millie Edwards," are drawing crowds to their "receptions." They are about 20 inches in height, perfectly proportioned, and are believed to be the smallest people in the world. They are also being produced, "for a consideration," at fashionable parties, are being petted and made much of, and seem greatly to enjoy themselves.

DEPUTATION.

NEW ART GALLERY.

On Friday the trustees of the Art Gallery of New South Wales waited on the Minister of Education with reference to the erection of a new art gallery. The deputation was composed of the following gentlemen:—Sir Alfred Stephen, C.B., K.C.M.G., Lieutenant-Governor; Messrs. Edward Combes, C.M.G., E. L. Montefiore, and E. Du Faur. Mr. Sidney, the secretary to the trustees, was also in attendance. Mr. Montefiore opened the subject by stating that the trustees desired to impress upon the Government the urgent necessity for the erection of a substantial gallery for the better safety and preservation of their valuable collection of works of art, the present building being unsuitable for the purpose, and apart from this consideration likely to lead to a deterioration of the pictures. He hoped that the Government would decide on erecting a distinct building for the purpose, and that all the surroundings would be in harmony. The trustees were prepared to point out several excellent sites in proximity to the Botanicals. The trustees hoped that in selecting a design the Government would not confine themselves to one large gallery, but would make provision for a series of rooms similar to galleries in Europe, suitable for various works of art, comprising paintings in oil, water colour, black and white, and sculptures, and also class rooms. Mr. Montefiore submitted plans and photographs of the Turin Art Gallery, said to be one of the finest in Europe.

Mr. Combes referred to the fact of its having been at one time contemplated to place the Art Gallery and Free Public Library under one roof, which he presumed, would have been at the top of King-street. In the event of its being decided to have a separate building, the trustees were prepared to recommend several sites in the Domain on which a Gallery of Arts might be erected. He was of opinion that the site selected should be one which would occupy a conspicuous position, as seen from the harbour. As regards the design itself, he hoped that the error committed by the Melbourne Government would be avoided of erecting one large gallery, and that Mr. Montefiore's suggestion would be followed out, in accordance with the plans of the Royal Academy of Arts in Burlington Gardens. Should the Government see fit to submit to the trustees their views on the subject, they would be very happy to give them all the information and assistance in their power in carrying them out.

Mr. Reid said that he was fully impressed with the importance of the subject brought under his notice; that a great and unexpected delay had prevented the erection of suitable buildings for the literary and artistic culture of the people; that the subject had already engaged the attention of the Government; and that amongst the earliest subjects to be considered by the Government during the recess would be the erection of a suitable Art Gallery. There were three questions to be considered—Whether it should be a separate and distinct building, the site and the plans, and construction of building. For his own part, he was strongly in favour of a distinct building, all the surroundings, as alluded to by Mr. Montefiore, being in harmony. He assured the deputation that, whatever might be decided on, the Government would be very glad to invite their co-operation, and to receive the benefit of their experience in all matters in connection with the proposed gallery, both as regards the site, design for the building, &c. As regards the present building, he might state that the Government had already taken steps to preserve the gallery from fire, not by putting up a brick casing, as they hoped for the early erection of a new building, but by keeping a constant watch over the premises.

Mr. Du Faur urged that the present gallery was not only unsuitable on account of its inflammable construction, but from its affording insufficient protection from the great changes in our climate; from extreme dryness to an atmosphere saturated with moisture, and pointed out that several valuable works had already suffered from these causes, and that in the case of A. Gow's "Relief of Leyden" the trustees had considered it necessary to send the picture home to the artist for repairs. He also advocated the building being a separate one, as so large an area of ground floor was evidently required.

Mr. Reid remarked that inasmuch as the gallery required was one rather spacious and elegant than massive and costly, they might hope to commence and finish it within a reasonable time, so as to enable the pictures to be removed before they suffered much deterioration. In reply to Mr. Montefiore, he stated that it would be impossible to place any sum on the Supplementary Estimates for this year, as they were already made up, but that no delay need take place in preparing plans and specifications.

After some discussion of an informal nature, in the course of which it was stated that the Sunday afternoon attendance had now settled down to an average of about 2200, the deputation withdrew.

POLICE.

CENTRAL POLICE COURT.

Mr. Dillon, S.M., presided on the bench in the Charge Court on Saturday morning.

A number of cases of drunkenness were dealt with.

James Bourke, on a charge of having a quantity of lead in his possession reasonably supposed to be stolen, was sentenced to be imprisoned for 48 hours.

Charles Brooks, alias Brock, also Edward Wilson, on a charge of having a velvet coat in his possession reasonably suspected to be stolen, was sentenced to be imprisoned for three months.

George Alexander White, on a charge of being a suspected person frequenting Hyde Park with intent to commit a felony, was sentenced to be imprisoned for seven days.

Patrick William O'Brien, on a similar charge, received a like sentence.

WATER POLICE COURT.

Mr. Marsh, S.M., presided on Saturday.

Joseph Lemon, a boy, was charged with having been found wandering in the company of reputed thieves. An order was made for the defendant to be sent on board the training ship Vernon.

Max Heckburn, a Swedish seaman of the ship Lili, for deserting from that vessel, was sent to gaol for six weeks.

Patrick Byrne, for assaulting one John Hanlon, was ordered to forfeit £2.

Annie Rowe and John Hannigan were charged with having offended against decency in Nobbs-street. The female defendant was fined £2, and the male defendant £2.

Mary Miller, for using obscene language on the Lane Cove-road, was fined £2.

CORONER'S INQUESTS.

On Saturday morning the City Coroner held an inquest on the body of a man named George Davies, who was found dead in his bed at the Picton Arms Hotel on the previous day. Evidence was given to the effect that the deceased, who was a miner by calling, had been lodging at the hotel for a few days, and on Friday morning as he had not left his room at a certain hour, the licensee, Mr. Jenkins, entered in order to awaken him. On approaching the bed which the deceased occupied he found that he was dead. Dr. M'Donough made a post-mortem examination of the body, and testified to the fact that the cause of death was disease of the heart. The jury found a verdict in accordance with the medical testimony.

The City Coroner also conducted an inquest on Saturday, on the body of Robert James Fox. The deceased, who was the licensee of the Theatre Royal Hotel, Liverpool-street, died at his residence at about 11.30 on the night of the 16th instant. He retired to his room as usual on the night in question, and from a washstand he took up a bottle which contained carbolic acid, and drank some of the mixture in mistake for medicine which he had been taking for indisposition. His daughter, a girl 13 years of age, noticed the mistake, and she informed her mother, who at once sent for medical assistance. Dr. Oram arrived, and he at once applied the stomach pump, but without avail, for the deceased expired shortly after taking the carbolic acid. The jury brought in a verdict that deceased died from the effects of a poison called carbolic acid, which he took on the night of the 16th instant, under the idea that he was taking a medicine.

THE RICHMOND AND CLARENCE DISTRICTS.

(BY OUR OWN REPORTER.)

The recent tour by Sir Henry Parkes through New England, and from the New England tableland to the coast, brought prominently before the notice of the public the importance of the districts situated in that part of the colony, and the great desire of the population settled there for railway communication, and the improvement of the navigation of two of the largest of our northern rivers. The deep importance to these people of this question of improved means of communication could not be more plainly seen than by the earnest manner in which it was pressed upon the attention of Sir Henry Parkes, and is urged upon every person of influence who visits the north. The eagerness to explain is accompanied by such an anxiety that the visitor should rightly understand and give the matter his support that sometimes, if it were not for the serious nature of the subject, the importunity of the complaining settler would be amusing. This was particularly noticeable during Sir Henry Parkes' stay in the River districts. At Woodburn on the Richmond River one of the farmers was so very anxious that Sir Henry should see the necessity for a railway to afford the population on the Richmond the means for getting their produce quickly to market, that he first came and begged Sir Henry to excuse him if at the dinner in the evening he should be very lengthy in speaking about the railway, and afterwards became so excited in urging the claims of the place that his language and actions were at times like those of a man in despair, and determined that we should not too soon forget what he so earnestly thrust upon our notice he followed us nearly the whole of the way from the Richmond to the Clarence, and at the moment of parting almost implored that something might be done to give the people railway communication. The desire for railways is expressed on all sides for the benefit of the country settlers and the advantage of residents in the towns. Land lies idle because the expense of conveying produce by road would make cultivation worse than unprofitable, and towns languish because produce cannot be brought to them from the surrounding districts in sufficient quantities and at sufficiently low cost. People within comparatively easy reach of the northern border talk of separation, and the advantage of either forming themselves into a distinct community or throwing in their lot with Queensland. They see the Queensland railway to Stanthorpe, and consider how quickly a line might be run eastward with branches to afford facilities to every locality now pining for it; and they compare the advantages they believe they would in that way enjoy, with what they regard as the vexatious delay in northern railway construction on the part of the Government of this colony. This talk of separation, however, is not general, and the discontent which gives rise to it is answered in some of the most important localities where railway facilities are wanted by the difference of opinion that exists with regard to the route a railway should take. And with reference to this difference of opinion nothing is more apparent to a visitor in some portions of the northern districts than the circumstance that this difference of opinion is caused by the desire to serve private interests. To the people of Grafton an outsider would think it mattered little which way the railway came to them from New England, for either of the two proposed routes might bring the trade they want; but people who have interests to serve between South Grafton and Glen Innes, favour the Glen Innes route; and people who have landed property along the proposed route to Tenterfield advocate that route. To the population north of the Clarence the question of route is important on public grounds, and only the Tenterfield route, with a branch to the Richmond, will be of any benefit to them. The struggle of contending parties in Grafton and on the tableland will probably continue until Parliament has finally decided the route that shall be adopted, but the opinion exists through a large portion of the districts interested in this railway that the matter has been practically settled by the results of official surveys recently completed—results which appear to point unmistakably to the Tenterfield route as being by far the better of the two which have been examined.

Starting from Grafton, the proposed line to Tenterfield would run in a northerly direction from the navigable waters of the Clarence through rich alluvial flats and undulating downs. Thence for a distance of six or seven miles it would go through unoccupied Crown land, skirting Whiteman Creek, and entering the rich country of Coaldale at a distance of 21 miles from Grafton. Passing the village of Coaldale, the line would meet with the Couldale Range, a spur of the Richmond Range, and there the first difficulty would be encountered, but the range would be surmounted by easy gradients and with no heavy works worth mentioning. The valley of the Clarence would then be entered at about 26 miles from Grafton, and from that point the country traversed is of a rich productive nature, admirably adapted, it is said, for large farming operations. At a point about four miles south of Tabulam, and near where it is proposed the junction of the branch line to the Richmond River shall be, the Clarence River would be crossed at the most favourable part, and the Timbarra River would be crossed a few miles further on. The bridges are described as of no great importance, and would not be of a very costly nature. From the Timbarra River the line, still keeping in rich country, would pass on to the foot of the tableland, where the ascent to Tenterfield is begun. Up to this point the line would be of a cheap nature, the gradients being admirably adapted to heavy and speedy traffic, and the ascent to the tableland would be performed with comparative ease, the country opening out in such a manner as to admit of gradients of not greater ratio than 1 in 40, and not much of that, while with the exception of three miles the curves would be of a favourable nature. For 20 miles the ascent would be made through country of a mountainous and unproductive character; but after that the line would enter the rich undulating downs that run to the eastward of Tenterfield, and so into the town of Tenterfield, joining the Great Northern railway at a point about 114 miles from Grafton. The proposed branch line to the Richmond would leave the Tenterfield and Grafton line near Tabulam, and passing for its whole length through a country of a most productive nature, would tap the waters of the Richmond at a point about 90 miles from the tableland. The works on this portion of the line would not be of a heavy nature, and the gradients in every way favourable.

On the other hand, the line to Glen Innes which has been surveyed from South Grafton, would pass almost its whole length through country which is described as being totally unfitted for any purpose but cattle-raising, no land being available for at least 90 miles of its length for cultivation of any kind. The rivers to be crossed along the route are described as numerous and formidable, while the gradients are of the most severe character, 1 in 33 being used for some miles, and the curves are sharp and very objectionable. The comparative cost of the two lines has been roughly estimated as follows:—Grafton to Tenterfield, 114 miles, at £9000 per mile, £1,026,000; branch line to Casino, 40 miles at £9000 per mile, £360,000—total, £1,386,000; South Grafton to Glen Innes, 102 miles at £16,000 per mile, £1,648,000. This shows a saving of £262,000 by constructing the Tenterfield line, and at the same time provides for a branch line to the Richmond; but the Tenterfield route is shown to be still more advantageous by a calculation of the probable cost of a line from a point on the Great Northern Railway to Inverell. The length of that line of railway would be 35 miles, and the estimated cost per mile would be £4000. This would make the total cost of the Inverell line £140,000, and adding this to the £1,386,000, representing the cost of the line from Tenterfield to Grafton, and the branch line to Casino, we have £1,526,000. From this it can be seen that a line can be made from Grafton to Tenterfield, with two branches to Casino and Inverell, at a less cost than the one line from South Grafton to Glen Innes, and the miles of railway constructed would be 189 as against 102.

The people of the Richmond River districts very naturally favour the Tenterfield route, but there is a difference of opinion among them as to the route the branch railway should take after it reaches their river. Unfortunately Casino and Lismore, the two principal towns on the river, have somewhat conflicting interests. Each of these towns is of considerable importance, for each is the centre of a large and flourishing district; but Casino is not so well situated as Lismore with regard to river navigation. Ocean-going steamers can go to Lismore, but cannot go to Casino, which is on an arm of the river not navigable for seagoing vessels, as high as the site of the town itself. This difficulty the Casino people, however, get over by the employment of small steamers between Casino and the small riverside town of Coraki, which is situated at the junction of the main river which runs to Lismore and the arm upon which Casino has been built. The residents of Casino expect the railway to come either into or near to their town, and they urge that it should then be taken to Coraki, so that communication might be secured in as ready a manner as possible with the best part of the river. Coraki is considered by those who think the railway should be taken there the centre of the Richmond River district, and within easy reach of the other towns; and the people are exceedingly anxious for better means of communication with other parts of the colony by railway and by sea, the latter method involving some expenditure upon the river bar. The Lismore people are not in favour of the railway going from Casino to Coraki, for the adoption of that route would probably place Casino in a position far more advantageous than could then be occupied by Lismore, and Lismore is the larger town, and the outlet for a very extensive tract of splendid agricultural country. The railway project which the residents of Lismore favour is one that would bring the railway from the tableland to their town—it may be even through Casino—and then to carry it on to Byron Bay, an indentation on the coast between the Richmond and the Tweed. The advocates of the Byron Bay scheme contend that the construction of a breakwater to connect some small islands adjacent to the shores of the bay would provide protection sufficient to form a safe and convenient harbour, which might be made the outlet of all the Richmond River country, and be the means of opening up for settlement the rich land that lies at present unoccupied north of the Richmond River. Up to the present, however, there is not sufficient evidence at hand to show properly what kind of a harbour Byron Bay would make, but instructions are said to have been issued lately for a proper survey and examination of the locality. One reason for the advocacy of Byron Bay is the defective nature of the bar at the entrance to the Richmond River; but even with the improvement of the river bar the Byron Bay project would not be abandoned. Probably in the course of time railways will feed a shipping traffic from Byron Bay as well as on the Richmond River, for undoubtedly there are a population and thriving industries existing in these districts which must be supplied with the best outlets for their products, and the best means of communication with the metropolis. The great productiveness of the soil and the success of the sugar industry are causing the area of land planted with the sugar-cane to be extended largely every year, and sugar mills are being erected in all directions. The profitableness of this occupation of cane-growing, and the general progress of the district have caused land to improve greatly in price, and the sums that have been paid in Lismore and in Casino for town allotments have been surprising. With this prosperity of course population is constantly increasing, and the towns have grown in size. The township of Woodburn, which is in the centre of the principal sugar-growing portion of the river, is now more than double the size it was about two years ago, and the other towns on the river are extending rapidly. The Woodburn people are troubled with a very bad road, which forms their only means of communication with the Clarence. It was the worst road we travelled over during the whole of our tour, and considering the amount of traffic upon it some expenditure for the purpose of improving it would certainly be justifiable. Until the people of these northern districts obtain railway communication they have a large claim to decent roads, but as things are the complaint is very general that the roads are sometimes so very bad that traffic is completely stopped.

RABBIT NUISANCE BILL.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I moved on Thursday night that the above bill when passed should remain in force only till the end of 1884.

I called for a division, but unknown to me there happened not to be a quorum in the Council. To save a count out we had recourse to a method which leaves it doubtful whether any one supported my amendment. I believe that several were prepared to do so, but still only a minority. Yet I don't want absent friends to erroneously infer that there were none—especially as in your report the arguments of those only against my proposition have been given: mine are entirely omitted.

I remarked upon the existing rabbit-hunting establishments of several great landholders—not squatters—of Riverina, which are by them conveniently kept up at an average expense of several thousand pounds each. I explained that we did not begrudge assistance to them (quite the reverse) in their laudable endeavour to keep down the nuisance; but that we doubted the adequacy of the fund, and were certain of the injustice of the source whence this fund would be derived—remarking besides on the oppressive working of the act to others than those rich and prepared anticipants of this act. The burden was seemingly lightened to the contributors by a conditional promise of 75 per cent. recoup. Seeing that the total rate will barely exceed £50,000, that salaries, with similar charges, will nearly swallow this, and that there is no assured endowment, whence is to come the recoup of claims which may exceed tenfold the whole rate, even if unencumbered by a prior charge?

I admitted the necessity of acting, and of acting promptly in every way, as if the colony were at war. I accepted the bill before us as our only available defence at the present juncture—its severity and partiality must be justified by the imminence of the danger. But we had been promised legislation next session on our land. Land, however, was being depreciated by three-fourths in New Zealand, and proportionately in Victoria by a like plague—in spite of legislation. How were we to know that this Act, copied from a too recent experiment in New Zealand, would realise our expectations as against the rational palliations of lower rents, better security, eradication of rabbit-fostering forest and scrub, and a fairer adjustment of the burden? All these cannot be considered in the Assembly at the present crisis, and, under the circumstances, must form part of the coming Land Acts. Therefore, the Council is now confined to hinting to our jealous colleagues below that this kind of rabbit nuisance bill is simply for the moment. It is utterly indefensible in its present shape for any continuance. For this reason, I propose that its operation be restricted till a period of Legislative leisure and experience—till the conclusion of the third session hence. This is allowing a full session for the remodelling of the Land Act, and of concluding an indispensable treaty with the adjoining colonies.

A very thin House, naturally containing more than its proportion of those who expect the benefits, and heed not the inconveniences of the bill before us—imbued, in fact, with the interests and prejudices of such half colonists as Tyson, Learmonth, M'Kechie, Halliday, Wilson, Robertson, &c.—disappointed last night my well-considered effort. However, I will try again after that some of our absentees shall have realised the extreme importance of the evil, and the consequent necessity of now fixing a period for renewed and cool legislation thereon.

I must also beg your recording another weighty argument in favour of a new bill so soon as we are at leisure, and have acquired experience—and, mark, this can only originate in the Assembly. Our bill is professedly copied from the last experiment of New Zealand; but there tenants with better tenure than have our squatters, do not contribute to the cost of permanently improving the land by destruction of rabbits: this payment there falls entirely on the owners of the land. Here, in a blind panic, we are accepting an impossible and therefore ineffectual principle, viz., that the only class who cannot benefit from the permanent improvement to our land shall alone bear its terrific cost. It may be demanded from our tenants on the spot to act as patriots, and to repair as best they can the breach whose enlargement threatens to submerge the colonies. We may fairly demand gratuitous exertion from those nearest to the danger, and with reason, during an emergency; but there can be no justification for persevering in unequal legislation after the difficulty is over. We should be inexcusable if we do not now provide for cooler legislation at some early period.

March 16. L. FANE DE SALIS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—It is clear from the tenor of your sub-leader on Wednesday last that rabbit-fanciers cannot look to you to champion them in their adversity. A few crumbs of comfort are doled out of a kind somewhat akin to those presented to the patriarch Job. You virtually tell the fancier that, as his rabbits must be cleared out, and that fancy prices can be got for his stock in other countries, the best plan is to ship them away and sell them. He is virtually asked to "kill the goose that has laid the eggs," and then reminded that by doing so he will suffer no loss. Let the hobby for keeping fancy rabbits be a "craze" if you wish, and let the fancier be coupled with the "keepers of guinea pigs and white mice;" but is it in justice to be advanced that, because other people do not sympathise with his hobby, and that hobby is not pernicious, he is to be persecuted? Are minorities to be crushed out altogether? If it could be shown by the production of the carcase of any wild rabbit, that the slightest trace of the characteristics of the lop-ear, angora, and other recognised fancy breeds existed in it, then I say the case for wholesale extermination is amply made out; but I deny that any such proof can be found. Any tyro who has seen a fancy rabbit can observe such glaring peculiarities that he could detect them in an instant if he had a glimpse of a wild rabbit, dead or alive. You are quite right in submitting that children who know nothing whatever about fancy breeding of rabbits, and whose parents encourage them to keep a lot of mongrels, so to term them, are a public nuisance, and that any amount of danger may be anticipated from allowing them to breed their half-wild animals; but the fancy breeder pure and simple is quite another individual. He could never breed fancy rabbits at all except under such extraordinary artificial treatment that, even if they did escape, the rabbits would die through surfeit of water or grass. Fancy rabbits are plethoric, and have no agility whatever to enable them to scamper away from their natural enemies. They cannot burrow, and even if they did not kill themselves with gorging or wrong diet, their enemies—quadruped and biped—are too numerous to permit them to live. We have a Marsupial Act, and people are allowed to keep tame kangaroos; we have a Native Dog Act, and the glory of a dog fancier is to get a pair of pure warrigals. I believe that in Sydney at the present time £50 would be paid for the latter. The Zoological Society is, I am told, pestered with requests from foreign societies to supply the very animals that we legislate to destroy. Even here an attempt is made to introduce vermin into the country which possessors of game at home pay capitation fees to exterminate. It is not to be supposed that these foreign Governments, who not only permit kangaroos or native dogs to be introduced, but actually ask for them, are ignorant of the nuisance they are to the people of the country whence they are obtained. They take precautions to avoid their being turned adrift. The rabbit-fanciers in the colony are prepared to accept any stringent regulations compelling them to use all sorts of precaution against the escape of their rabbits, and they are met with a flat refusal to entertain any other project than the extermination of rabbits of any kind whatever. There are rabbits and rabbits, and while the one is a national nuisance it is against the nature of the other, and most certainly against the interest of its owners, to allow it to escape from confinement. You seem to think that exceptional legislation is a mistake. So it may be; but we have plenty of it in our national statute-book, and why are the rabbit-fanciers to be specially selected as not worthy of it. I must also take exception to the statement that we have only a few fancy rabbit breeders in the colony. It is no argument that because we have had but few rabbits at our agricultural societies' shows that we have not numerous fancy breeders. There are several reasons why owners have not been exhibitors. One is in consequence of the bad accommodation generally provided for these exhibits; another is that breeders will not risk their valuable exhibits being killed by the kindness of passing visitors who feed these exhibits with all kinds of bad food; and a third reason is the paltry sum generally given for prize money, which does not compensate fanciers for the great risk in exhibiting. It was only at the last Agricultural Society's exhibition at Prince Alfred Park that I noticed a valuable prize rabbit lying dead in its pen through being overfed by visitors. There are breeders of prize rabbits in the colony who have refused as much as £5 each for some of their stock, and now, after expending capital and years of valuable time to bring their pets to a state of perfection, they are by the Act passed by the Legislative Assembly ordered to destroy them, and to do so without one penny compensation. Fanciers can only hope that the Legislative Council will not see a gross injustice done to them, and that they will, when the bill comes before them for consideration, replace the clause as originally proposed by the Minister of Mines, to allow fancy rabbits to be kept in secured hutches, and not consent to the tyrannical amendment carried upon the the motion of Sir John Robertson, which imposes a penalty of £20, or imprisonment on any person convicted of having a live rabbit of any description in his possession. I am, &c.,

A. J. GRAY, Hon. Sec.

It appears, from a paper just issued by order of the Legislative Assembly, that the total length of subordinate roads under trustees is 1957 miles, on which it is proposed to expend during the present year £25,994. THE MARINE BOARD AND THE AUSTRAL INQUIRY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In the letter which you laid me under an obligation by inserting in your issue of the 7th instant, I hazarded a conjecture that we should probably soon know how it was that the Board of Trade managed, through the Colonial Office and the Governor, to put upon our Marine Board sufficient pressure to stifle the legitimate inquiry into the foundering of the Austral which it had initiated.

When I wrote that letter I had no idea that the further information referred to would so soon be forthcoming. It appears now that the whole chain of impulses, from the Board of Trade downward, is completed by the documents set out or indicated in the further opinions of the Attorney-General laid before Parliament.

Of these documents the most remarkable is unquestionably the telegram of the ex-Colonial Treasurer, Mr. Watson, which replying to the question submitted to him by Mr. Eagar whether there would be any objection to the request of the Home Government that the inquiry into the Austral casualty should be held in London on the return of the vessel, instead of in Sydney, recorded approval in these words: "I approve of the course you have taken in directing that the inquiry into the sinking of the Austral shall not be held by the Marine Board."

Although Mr. Eagar had by no means taken the course of directing that the inquiry in question should not be held by the Marine Board, but had merely induced the board to delay the inquiry, and although Mr. Watson's answer to Mr. Eagar's telegram is no reply to the question submitted, yet, so far as the Marine Board was concerned with the instructions of the Minister as a guide to its course of conduct in the matter, there can be little doubt that Mr. Watson's instructions to the board were that the board should abandon the inquiry absolutely. The most refined casuistry could hardly give a different interpretation to the words used than that which the Marine Board and the Treasury officials evidently felt constrained to adopt.

The first remark I have to make on the Minister's telegram—it came from Young, we are informed, where Mr. Watson was probably at the time engaged in settling the plans of his electioneering campaign—is that a ministerial telegram is not an act of the Governor and Executive Council.

No "act, matter, or thing done or performed by the Marine Board" is subject to the "disallowance" of the Colonial Treasurer, even supposing that the act of Mr. Watson in this case were the "disallowance of an act, matter, or thing" within the meaning of the statute to which you referred in your leading article of the 13th instant. The only authority competent to disallow any such act, matter, or thing is the "Governor," or more precisely, according to the interpretation clause of the statute, the Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council.

The Marine Board, however, by the terms of its minute, dated the 5th instant, has considered the Colonial Treasurer to be the statutory equivalent, or alter ego, of the Executive. But the absurdity of that view of the "Governor's" relation to the judicial and administrative duties entrusted to the board is so obvious, that it would be merely a waste of time to expose it. And if the board has acquiesced in the assumption by Colonial Treasurers of powers vested in a different and a higher authority, all that can be said is that such an acquiescence has been as utterly without warrant as the assumption has been without justification.

The lifting of the veil from the remarkable series of acts of infatuation (there is no other word to use) which marks the descent of an important local tribunal from the state of independence in which the statute had left it to the state of captivity at which it has arrived in the course of a few years of departmental tutoring, has disclosed nothing more deplorable, nothing more disastrous to the healthy action of responsible Government than this latest exhibition of the facility with which a judicial body can surrender its functions at the dictation of a single member of the Executive, if he only happens to be its departmental controller. The climax will be reached when, by the facile delegation of responsible duties by Parliamentary chiefs to their subordinates, the Under Secretary will become the recognised equivalent of the Executive. Then we shall enter upon the epoch of government by under-secretaries, if, indeed, we have not done so already.

So far I have proceeded on the assumption that the initial step taken by the Marine Board for the purpose of holding its inquiry into the sinking of the Austral was within the meaning of the section in the Navigation Act referred to by you, an "act," "matter," or "thing" liable to disallowance by somebody, it is certain that that "somebody" was not the Colonial Treasurer.

With every respect for the opinion expressed in your article that "the words of the statute do not warrant the interpretation that the power of disallowance applies only to the results of completed inquiries," I think it can be proved, not only out of the statute itself, but from the rules governing the interpretation of Acts of Parliament, that there exists no power whatever of "disallowing" even a completed judicial act of the board in reference to Board of Trade certificates, much less such a merely inchoate act as the citation of the captains to appear, which I presume was the initial step taken in the board's projected inquiry.

That inquiry, it must be remembered, was commenced in the exercise of the powers conferred on the Marine Board by the 87th and 88th sections of the Navigation Act, 35 Vic., No. 7, as amended and extended by section 21 of the Act 45 Vic., No. 6.

The procedure authorised by these enactments is entirely confined to the cancellation or suspension of the certificates of masters, mates, and engineers, upon proved incompetency or misconduct. But the finding of the board in reference to Board of Trade certificates is not final. It requires to be confirmed by the Governor in the first instance, and it is liable even after such confirmation to be reviewed by the Board of Trade, that authority being empowered by the Merchant Shipping Act amendment of 1862, "to re-issue and return any certificate cancelled or suspended by Marine Boards; or to shorten the time of its suspension, or to grant a new certificate of the same, or any lower grade in the place of the certificate so cancelled or suspended."

That is to say that, by express enactment in a later part of the same Navigation Act which contains the general power of disallowance in an earlier section (the 17th), particular provision has been made by the Legislature of this colony, in terms re-enacting the requirements of the Imperial Act, having special application to a certain act "done and performed" by the Marine Board—that is to say, to the judicial act of suspending or cancelling a certificate.

A common sense interpretation of the two sections in the colonial Act must lead to the conclusion that it could not be intended that such a judicial Act was to be liable to disallowance under section 17, in all its stages, from the citation which commenced the inquiry down to the finding of the board which closed it, when the finding itself, as a final and determinate act, was all the time liable to be annulled by the refusal of the Governor to confirm it, especially when it is remembered that the "disallowing" and the "confirming" authority (the Governor) were in each case identical. What sense, I would ask, could there be in subjecting the initial and every intermediate step of an inquiry to the power of disallowance by the Governor, when the decision itself, when it took the form of cancellation or suspension of a Board of Trade certificate, would be a nullity without his confirmation?

In the case of Marine Board certificates the power of "disallowance" under the 17th section unquestionably exists, and the findings of the board are always liable to the exercise of that power, but Board of Trade certificates are, it is manifest, governed by the special proviso in section 88 of our Act, and are not in any way within the operation of its 17th section.

Then, again, what is an "act, matter, or thing done and performed" within the meaning of this 17th section? Such an expression must, I apprehend, have a reasonable meaning given to it. Applied to the judicial acts of the Board, an act, &c., is done and performed, one would suppose, when it has taken such a form that the power of disallowing it can be exercised by the disallowing authority in such a way and at such a stage, and with such effect as to annul it as an exercise of judicial power by the board. In this case the board proposed to hold an inquiry. Did it hold the inquiry? certainly not. It took an initial step towards doing so, and its further action was then arrested by the appearance on the scene of the Ministerial Deus ex machina, who contrary to all authority interposed long before there was a dignus vindice nodus. But what conceivable thing was there in a citation to disallow? How can you annul a summons? Let anyone attempt to express in terms of an injunction, or indeed in any judicial or official language, the disallowance of a citation or summons, and the absurdity of the whole thing will be immediately apparent. An "act, matter, or thing, done and performed" by the board must of necessity be something done and performed or purporting to be done and performed, under and pursuant to an authority contained in one or other of the various statutes under which the board has been constituted and clothed with jurisdiction, or with administrative powers. In the present case the precise statutory authority is to cancel or suspend certificates. The "act, matter, or thing," therefore, "done and performed" in exercise of that authority must of necessity be the act of cancellation or suspension. And that this must be the kind of act contemplated is made still more clear by the use of the word "disallowance," the meaning of which is well illustrated in connection with the power vested in the Queen under 5 and 6 Vic., cap. 76 of declaring her "disallowance" of colonial bills.

Upon principles of interpretation, moreover, nothing is better recognised as a canon in the construction of Acts of Parliament than the old rule expressed by Bacon, "All words, if they be general and not express and precise, shall be restrained unto the fitness of the matter and the person." Accordingly, when general words, such as those employed in the 17th section, and particular words, such as those employed in the 88th section of the Act in question, seem on the face of them applicable to the same subject matter, it is a constant practice for the Courts to restrain the general by the particular words, on the obvious ground that the particular intention of the Legislature must have been intended to govern the general intention.

I know that by an Imperial Act passed last year (45 and 46 Vic. c. 76), this confirmation by the Governor of Marine Board reports is abolished, so far as it was required by the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854—the requirement being, in fact, incorporated totidem verbis in our own statute; but that fact has no bearing on the question now before us, which is the interpretation of certain words in a local Act by reference to other words in the same Act, and, so far as our local law is concerned, the report of the Marine Board if it deals with Board of Trade certificates, still requires the Governor's confirmation.

As a matter of law, therefore, I maintain that the Executive was not authorised to interfere with the action of the Marine Board at any stage of this inquiry by the exercise of the power of disallowance, because the statute had expressly reserved to the Executive the right to confirm the board's finding as an essential condition of its validity. And the Marine Board being perfectly well aware of the necessity of such confirmation, should have represented that fact to the Colonial Treasurer, and requested that the opinion of the Crown law officers on the point should be taken. Instead of doing so, the board abandoned its position without the slightest demur, and, further, accepted the ill-considered and, as some people think, the rather enigmatical telegram of its ministerial head as an act of deliberate disallowance by the Governor in Council.

I now pass to another point. You say in your article that the chief object of the Marine Board would have been to ascertain whether the Austral was sunk through the default of the captain or officers—that these gentlemen would have been, therefore, on their trial—and you may ask whether, if the board had found that they had not been guilty of neglect, and had let them go free from blame, "Would they have asked for a rehearing or made an appeal?" And you add that their acquittal might have cast the fault upon the ship, and that interests of the owners could not have been vindicated by a re-hearing without in some sense placing the men upon their trial again.

I at once admit that there is much force in this objection, and in reply to the question put by you I suppose there is no other answer to give than the obvious one that the parties acquitted would not be very likely to ask for a re-hearing, or to appeal. But there is an Imperial Act which has not been cited during this discussion, under which the Board of Trade "may in any case, and shall, if new and important evidence which could not be produced at the investigation, has been discovered, or if for any other reason there has, in their opinion, been ground for suspecting a miscarriage of justice, order that the case be reheard either generally or as to any part thereof, and either by the Court or authority by whom it was heard in the first instance, or by the Wreck Commissioner," or by a Judge in Admiralty. Now, the same parties, who evidently expected a miscarriage of justice if this inquiry had been continued and concluded by the Sydney Marine Board, and contrived to oust its jurisdiction by the ingenious tactics now so well known, could have easily, in the case put by you, have procured a rehearing through the same authority which they had already moved so effectually for another purpose. And that rehearing, as is clear from the words of the statute just quoted (the Shipping Casualties Investigation Act, 1879), might have been as to part of the case only; that is to say, as to so much only as discredited the principles of the ship's construction or her stability. Such a partial rehearing might have rehabilitated the theories of the builders or the character of the ship generally without necessarily having the effect of putting the officers a second time on their trial.

A third series of papers in connection with this casualty was laid before Parliament on Thursday evening, consisting of a letter from the Solicitor of the Board of Trade to the Shipping Master of this port and the opinion of the Attorney-General thereon. The latter may be allowed to speak for itself; the former invites a few observations.

The very first paragraph of that letter is an admission that the Board of Trade could exercise no jurisdiction whatever in respect of this casualty until witnesses had arrived in the United Kingdom. This has been so loudly denied in certain quarters that it is well to remind dissentients that the very first step taken by the Board of Trade—the despatch of the telegram through the Colonial Office—was taken by a body which then had no authority itself to hold or to commit to others the holding of the very inquiry which it caused our board to abandon. The Solicitor to the Board of Trade writes: "Upon the return of the necessary witnesses to the United Kingdom the Board of Trade contemplate holding an official investigation"—and he proceeds to invite, in the politest of official language, our Shipping Master to get depositions from a variety of people supposed by him to be now in Sydney, upon all sorts of subjects bearing upon the foundering of the ship. Of course the Board of Trade's solicitor knew perfectly well all that had happened since the foundering had been telegraphed to England, and was perfectly well aware how patiently the Marine Board had submitted to the process of being "dished" by the Imperial Board. He was in the secret of the whole affair. But his ingenuity must have been racked to discover any method of getting evidence from absent witnesses of the casualty and as to other important matters, now that the Marine Board had been ordered to stand aloof.

In his extremity he bethinks himself of the Shipping Master who, as the Attorney-General has pointed out, is altogether incompetent by law to summon witnesses, enforce their attendance, or administer oaths to them. To the Shipping Master, however, he applies, to provide him with evidence for the investigation before the wreck commissioner; and it is worthy of observation that instead of forwarding his application through the Colonial Office and the Governor to the proper department here, this gentleman writes directly to the Shipping Master. So the hugger-mugger business (there is no fitter word to use) which began with the impulse given to the Board of Trade to send the famous telegram is consummated by a clandestine supplication to the Shipping Master to purvey the necessary evidence for the official inquiry in England! And our Marine Board is compelled meanwhile to stand aside, and extract such consolation as it may from the pitiable series of blunders which its supercession has already created, while it is told to forget that it ever had the audacity to deal severely, as some people thought at the time, with the Board of Trade certificate of the captain of the Chimborazo.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY.

THE BANQUET.

The annual dinner in honour of St. Patrick's Day took place on Saturday night at Needs' Assembly Rooms, Liverpool-street. The room in which the tables were laid was tastefully ornamented with flags, which gave it a very pretty appearance, and the attractiveness of the proceedings was materially enhanced by the music provided for the occasion under the direction of Mr. Ernest Needs. The caterer was Mr. J. Callaghan. The chair was filled by Mr. J. P. Garvan, M.L.A., and the vice-chairs by Dr. Goode and Mr. J. T. Toohey, and among the company were Sir John Robertson, Sir Patrick Jennings, Hon. Henry Copeland, Mr. D. O'Connor, M.L.A., Mr. T. Dalton, M.L.A., Mr. W. T. Coonan, M.L.A., Mr. T. O'Mara, M.L.A., Mr. J. B. Olliffe, M.L.A., Mr. J. E. Redmond, M.P., and Messrs. J. G. O'Connor, T. Curran, T. J. Ryan, J. M. Toohey, J. Cleary, E. Farrell, F. B. Freehill, J. G. O'Ryan, C. Moore, T. Butler, R. Prendergast, P. Sheridan, R. Kirby, J.P., C. O'Neill, Dr. Power, Dr. M'Donagh, W. Redmond, M. M. M'Girr, E. F. Flanagan, Rev. D. P. Quirk, M.A., and Rev. D. Mahoney.

After dinner the chairman announced that apologies for non-attendance had been received from Sir James Martin, Mr. Justice Faucett, Mr. Justice Windeyer, Sir George Innes, Hon. Alexander Stuart, Hon. W. B. Dalley, Hon. J. S. Farnell, Hon. H. E. Cohen, Hon. G. R. Dibbs, and the Hon. G. H. Reid.

The CHAIRMAN proposed the toast of "The Queen." He said: It was with loyalty as with all other virtues that there were two ways of showing it to the world—the way of fulsome praise, and the way of silent action. (Hear, hear.) There are some men who lived on it, and there were others who died for it. (Hear, hear.) The great captains of the world would tell them that among those who took the latter way of showing it were the chivalrous people who met on this day to celebrate their national festival. (Cheers.) The great Empire of Queen Victoria had been defended and protected on every battle-field where it had been assailed—the national honour had been vindicated, and the integrity of the Empire preserved as much by the valour of Irishmen as by any other means under heaven. (Cheers.) In Europe, and Asia, and Africa they had shed their blood for their Queen and their country with at least as much alacrity and indifference to life as the most favoured subjects of the realm. (Cheers.) The countrymen of such men had the proudest title on such occasions as this to drink a toast which revived memories of duties, and sacrifices, and splendid valour. (Cheers.) He proposed "The Queen," who was at this moment as she had been since her glorious reign began, guarded and protected by the heroism and fidelity of tens of thousands of gallant Irishmen in both branches of her service. (Cheers.)

The toast was drunk with cheering.

The CHAIRMAN then proposed the toast of "The Prince of Wales and the Royal Family." He said if we were permitted to indulge in anticipations of the future of the Empire, under the sway of the heir to the Throne, when, in the course of time, he was called to occupy it, we might contemplate that future without misgiving. (Hear, hear.) Laborious, sympathetic, humble, and dutiful, the Prince of Wales had given full promise of his capacity to govern by showing how ready he was to serve. He asked them to drink his health with all the honours.

The toast was drunk with cheers.

The CHAIRMAN then asked the company to drink "The health of his Excellency the Governor, Lord Augustus Loftus." (Applause.) Though his Excellency came to his present office from a career passed in other employments, he had discharged his duties with credit and with satisfaction. He proved elsewhere, and among great names in European history, his capacity and his moderation. He proved here day by day how fitted he was to represent his Sovereign by his sagacity and by his amiability. He (the chairman) would have been glad to have seen him to-night occupying, as an Irish gentleman, the chair at this gathering—(cheers)—and he felt sure that had he been there he would have received as warm a welcome as in any company he might honour by his presence. (Cheers.)

Dr. GOODE proposed the toast of "The Ministry."

The toast was drunk with cheers and musical honours.

Sir PATRICK JENNINGS, who on rising was received with much applause, responded.

Mr. COPELAND, who was well received, also responded to the toast. He said: Personally it gives me very great pleasure to meet here a number of gentlemen who are essentially Irishmen. When I left my own electorate in New England I left an absolute certainty; but I thought I should go to Newtown, and afterwards contest the seat as one of the new Ministers; and when I contested Newtown I received the largest support from the Irishmen of Newtown. (Cheers.) I wish to say that during the late contest, when all the political forces were in full swing, when many parties were waging war against me, when all kinds of squibs were being printed, and every possible machinery was used to debar me from entering Parliament as Minister for Public Works, my Irish friends—(cheers)—resident in East Sydney rallied up and voted for me almost to a man. (Cheers.) I feel a deep debt of gratitude to the Irishmen for the way they rallied round me on that occasion—(cheers)—and I should be the meanest skunk in creation if I did not come round to what Irishmen term a national demonstration. And I come here now to substantiate by my presence my sympathies with a meeting of this kind. I am perfectly in sympathy with an organisation of this kind. I never was a man to hesitate in giving expression to my opinions. I am free to admit that difficulties have arisen during the last few days between Australian colonists and our friend Mr. Redmond, who sits on my left. (Cheers, and manifestation on the part of some of those present to induce the speaker to say nothing about Mr. Redmond.) I am quite free to admit that these differences have arisen. I don't think they should have arisen. (Hear, hear.) I believe I stand here as the representative of the Works Department—(hear, hear)—and it has been generally considered that I would be a man. I think I can make it clear that the general opinion of the country was that I would be one of those men who would exercise his own opinion in a matter of this kind. (Hear, hear.) Well, I can assure you, since I have been in the Works Department, only a few weeks ago—and I wish you to bear that in mind—well, gentlemen, I say that in my position as Minister for Works and Minister for Railways I have found it my duty, and my absolute necessity, to refuse a pass to Mr. Redmond. (Cries of "Oh," and dissent.) I come to this question rather abruptly, because I was interrupted. Coming to that question, I should like to say a few words on the subject. (Interruption, and a voice: "We don't want it.") Whether you like it or not I shall say a few words. (Cheers, and dissent.) I have never seen the multitude that would shout me down, or prevent me from giving expression to my opinions. (Hear, hear.) My opinions are fixed very much. So far as questions of this kind are concerned, I say that the question arises in reference to Mr. Redmond, who sits on my left hand—that the question arises, and I take this proceeding, and I am particularly desirous that the press should report what I have to say, because they have previously reported something somewhat different from what I actually did do. (Interruption.) Now, the community nor the Government never could suffer by having the truth stated. (Cheers and interruption.) If I can't remain a member of the Government by having the truth stated, then I say let the Government go to the devil. (Interruption and laughter.) Well, the facts of the case are simply these. Mr. Coonan, the member for Orange—(renewed interruption, and a voice, "What has that got to do with these proceedings?") Well, I don't know whether you, gentlemen, desire to—(interruption.) Well, it has been suggested to me that I should not go into this subject. I don't really see why I should not, because I can give a very good explanation—(interruption)—and notwithstanding—(cries of "time")—my hon. and respected colleague, Sir Patrick Jennings—(renewed cries of "time," and a voice: "There are several other speakers, Mr. Copeland.") Under the advice of my very good friend, Sir Patrick Jennings, I shall now take this opportunity of continuing the remarks I have got to make. (Interruption.) I am not usually sat down upon by a few, and I shall say this much, that although I do desire to explain the railway pass to my friend, Mr. Redmond—(interruption)—because he was a member of the House of Commons, I found—(cries of "Shut up!" and other exclamations.) I saw this fact when I came to inquire into the matter, I found that the rules were hard and fast laid down that where gentlemen were lecturing for monetary considerations that they should not receive a pass. I could give many instances that would coincide with the approval I agree to, but what I want to say is this—(A voice: "Why the man is drunk.") I want to say a word to Irishmen. It may be that hitherto I have not addressed my remarks sufficiently near of the sympathy of representative Irishmen. ("Oh," and a voice: "Yes, we know you're a brick.) But when I look around on the present occasion, I see so many gentlemen who are personal friends of mine—(hear, hear)—I want to say this much, that I personally am free to admit that I at my election—(A voice: "Yes, you told us that before"—I appealed to Irish sympathy, and it was extended to me at the last election. (A voice: "He's tight.") I say that had it not been for the Irish sympathy that was extended to me by the Irishmen, and by the Roman Catholics, I should have been defeated by a considerable number. (Interruption and confusion.) Well, gentlemen, you may say what you like—(interruption)—I simply want to say a few words. (Here the band struck up, and an attempt was made to induce Mr. Copeland to sit down.) Mr. Chairman and gentlemen I want to say a few words—(interruption)—I am the Minister for Works, and I am determined to say what I want to say whether the chairman or anybody else has a different opinion. I simply want to say this much as far as I am concerned, I am extremely thankful to the gentlemen—(interruption)—the gentlemen who voted for me in the last contest, and because of that, gentlemen, I look upon them as the whole of my constituents. And I want to say this. This is what I want to say. (Interruption, and a voice: "And the last of it I hope.") It's not the last of it. I have had an opportunity of speaking to the Irishmen of New South Wales. (Cries of "Time," and interruption.) Mr. Chairman, I appeal to you as to whether—gentlemen, I appeal to you to say whether the chairman is in order in intimating to me that I should cut it short. What I want to say is this. I want to appeal to you as Irishmen of New South Wales. I want to say a few words to you on a very important question. (Continued interruption.) I think, sir, from the fact that I have been living in these colonies for the last 27 or 28 years I may be reasonably concluded to have some idea of what is good for Englishmen, Irishmen, and Scotchmen. (Interruption.) In considering this question I think I may say a few words in the way of friendly advice. (Cries of "Oh," and interruption.) I do not care a d——, it does not matter to me. (Cries of "Time," and interruption.) I want to say a few words of friendly advice. If 50 people want to speak, I say I want to say a few words of friendly advice. I said Englishmen, Mr. Chairman. (Interruption.) Mr. Chairman—(continued interruption)—I stand here as a Yorkshireman and as an Englishman—(hear, hear)—and I say, that I have a right, as a member of the Ministry, on this occasion to make a few remarks, and to give a few remarks that I think necessary. (An effort was made to induce Mr. Copeland to sit down, and a voice: "He will make things worse.") Go to the devil. (Interruption.) I say that in the interest of those nationalities it would be a desirable thing now—of course you limit my action by the comments, by the remarks that have been made—you deprive me from using the arguments that I otherwise would have used, and you simply limit me to the bare substantive motion. I say if you allowed me to use the arguments I would have used, I would have proved that it would have proved that it would be in the interest of this country, and in the interest of Ireland, and of all other countries that the English Parliament should be held every triennial year—("Chair!" and laughter)—in Dublin,—that the English Parliament should be held in London one year, in the second year in Dublin, and in the third year in Edinburgh. (Cries of "Time," "Chair.") I would like to have said a few words to you on this subject, and I wanted to speak to you—(interruption and cries of "Chair," "Time," and "Shame.") I say, Gentlemen, that in that proposal I have to make to you is a solid and substantial motion. (Interruption.) I say if the British Government were permitted to hold their sessions of Parliament one year in Dublin, one year in Edinburgh, and one year in London—I say that the hon. members of the House of Commons would go over there, and in the meantime, when the House is not sitting—(cries of "Chair")—they would become acquainted with the whole fabrication. I say the members of the House of Commons would be acquainted with the whole concern. ("Chair!") I say although the members of the House of Commons went from London to Dublin they would travel from Dublin to the—(renewed cries of "chair," and interruption)—and they would learn all the difficulties and all the discrepancies, and wherever a quarrel had arisen—(loud cries of "chair," and interruption)—I say that the—— (Renewed cries and interruption, during which Mr. Copeland resumed his seat.)

The CHAIRMAN: Mr. O'Connor will propose the next toast.

Mr. COPELAND (rising): I object, Mr. Speaker. (Cries of "Sit down.")

Mr. COPELAND continued standing, and the chairman also rose. (Loud cries of "chair," and interruption.)

A VOICE: Mr. Copeland, there is another speaker.

Another VOICE: Look here, Mr. Copeland, we intend to carry this out properly, and are not going to be humbugged by you. (Renewed cries of "chair.")

The CHAIRMAN: In the conduct of a gathering of this kind there is a certain deference and respect paid to the chairman—(cheers)—and if in the carrying out of the proceedings of the evening the chairman's advice is not listened to, his authority is of no use; for this gathering. (Cheers.) The toast proposed has been warmly received and honoured—(cheers)—and there are other toasts, and I trust that the good sense and taste of Mr. Copeland will recognise that fact. (Cheers.) There is no one present who has had a heartier or warmer reception than Mr. Copeland. (Cheers.) There is no one who deserves a better reception at the hands of not only the Irishmen, but of all others, than Mr. Copeland—(cheers)—and I am quite sure none will recognise better than Mr. Copeland the necessity of letting the other toasts be proposed. (Cheers.) I therefore call upon Mr. O'Connor to propose the next toast.

Sir JOHN ROBERTSON, who was received with cheers, responded. Alluding to the visit of Mr. Redmond, he said they had there that night a representative of a greater Parliament than ours—a Parliament of far older memory, a Parliament that had done more for our race, more for liberty, and for fair play, than any other body of men in all the world. He hoped that whatever differences there might be among the men of action that their friend Mr. Redmond—(cheers)—would go away fully impressed with our love of fair play—(cheers)—he meant a Parliamentary love of fair play—of freedom, and of loyalty to the great old country from which we had sprung. (Applause.) He hoped that however much in his youthful views—and he (Sir John) was in the habit now-a-days of taking the part of the youngsters—(bravo)—he hoped that when Mr. Redmond left us he would go away knowing that if sometimes we could not agree with all the proposals he submitted, we all desired to do battle for that which we believed was right and good, and for the benefit of the world. (Cheers.) We had never shown here any disposition to wrap ourselves in the interests of Australia only. (Cheers.) We had always been willing to put forward our hand to help those who were in want—those who were in poverty and wretchedness and misery. (Cheers.) We had not shut ourselves out from that because we were a thoroughly cosmopolitan people. (Hear, hear.) We were perhaps more mixed in this country than in other countries of the world; but he hoped we should have no party troubles and difficulties, but that we should become one homogeneous whole, and in the end a great and free people. (Cheers.)

The CHAIRMAN proposed "The day we celebrate." (Cheers.) He said the toast which he had the honour to propose was, he regretted, in the hands of one who lacked those qualities typical of the land they were there to celebrate, but in exciting times they had thought there was a fitness in entrusting it to a prosaic individual like himself, whose discretion would keep a steady hand on the rein, but which, he regretted to say, would make wanting the beautiful poetry and imagination that usually lit a gathering of Irishmen and their descendants had such full play on a St. Patrick's Day celebration. (Cheers.) But imbued as he was with the spirit and teaching of his life in this sunny southern land that knew no peer in all the attributes of perfect intelligent human freedom—(applause)—let him say that the slightest clipping of the wings of Irish fancy in this their national celebration had not been demanded or expected by any trueborn or genuine Australian. (Cheers.) If one shadow of doubt hung round the organisers of this gathering to-day, look away from our hospitable shores and recognise in any unfair or hostile criticism that had been offered to the annual gathering—recognise in this opposition a remnant of old-world prejudice or ignorance, and not the hearty hospitable greeting that Australia had given, and ever would give, to the good and true men and women of every clime and every creed. (Cheers.) To-night their gathering was essentially one of joyous social greeting—happiness at seeing and meeting one another after the lapse of another year, and in every word and sentiment that was uttered that evening care would be taken as on every previous celebration of this kind that no subject or topic likely to create dissension or ill-feeling should be referred to. (Applause.) Religion and politics should be relegated to more sacred and fitting places than in this banquet hall. To-night he would say of religion, with their immortal poet Moore,—

" Shall I ask the brave soldier who fights by my side
In the cause of mankind if our creeds agree;
Shall I give up the friend I have valued and tried?
If he kneel not before the same altar with me."

(Cheers.) To-night they paid homage to that beauteous imagery of true religion, and though it might not be as dogmatic as some people would wish it was, certainly the principle that animated him—a principle that it was honourable to live for, and would be noble to die for. (Cheers.) Contentious politics they would be pleased to leave to be dealt with in another and he hoped a better place—Macquarie-street. (Oh!) Everywhere throughout the British dominions this day was celebrated—(cheers)—and in almost every nation of the earth the roving yet indomitable energy of Irishmen had established for themselves a home, and to-night from the capitals of nearly the whole of the civilised world gatherings of Irishmen revived with witty speech round the social glass memory of more youthful days. (Cheers.) Even royalty itself paid deference to the day, and he had seen the son of her Majesty ostentatiously decorate his horses and carriage with green ribbon, and wear a large bunch of shamrocks in his coat. (Applause.) Thus at the very centre round which revolved the loyalty and affection of the British nation, this day was recognised in as marked a manner as by us in Australia. (Cheers.) He well remembered the marked manner in which the last regiment of British soldiers that were located in Sydney—men and officers—honoured St. Patrick's Day. As soon as midnight chimed the departing hour of the 16th March the magnificent band of the regiment ushered in the 17th with vigorous and spirited rendering of Irish airs, which were repeated at intervals throughout the day; and the soldiers as they mounted guard during the day conspicuously wore the shamrock in their caps—(cheers)—and these were men belonging to a regiment that many a time had fought and bled for the winning and maintaining of those glories that were the pride of the Empire. (Cheers.) In our midst helping to build up a great Australian nation were men from many countries. Yearly in some way, specially devoted to the sacred remembrance of the land of their birth, did we find the German solemnly, yet cheerfully, reviving the memories of fatherland. The Frenchman, as also the American, in patriotic and honoured remembrance of their native land, once at least in every year paid special homage and lovingly recalled the memories of the land of their birth. (Cheers.) And, coming closer home, did we not find the Welshmen the other day, in the capital of the Northern colony, reviving the memories of native land, and presided over by a most distinguished man, Mr. Griffith, leader of the Parliamentary Opposition? (Cheers.) And on the 1st of January, in each recurring year, had we not a magnificent gathering, under the auspices of some of the most distinguished of our citizens, to do honour to the historic land of Wallace and of Bruce? (Cheers.) And did anyone see in any of those gatherings, in any of the reviving of the memory of early years and the holy and hallowed associations that in the mind of every good man hover round the land of his birth—did anyone see in such gatherings any danger to the peace and well-being of the State? (Cheers.) Many present were of Australian birth, but of Irish parentage; their presence there that evening was a fitting tribute to their parents, who to the latest moment of their lives cherished with undying love the memory of their native land. Their presence to-night, prompted by filial affection, was the surest sign, the strongest proof, that the love of their own country, beautiful Australia, would be faithfully and honorably preserved, and if ever needed, be bravely maintained. (Cheers.) And they whose privilege it was to claim as the place of their nativity the land they were met that night to honour, whilst cherishing with a patriot's love the land of their childhood's home, owed their filial duty to their parent land. By the strength and tenderness and enduring character of that love would they be adjudged true and brave, and loving to the land of their wedded choice, Australia. (Cheers.) As the fidelity of wedded love was gauged by the tenderness of filial devotion, so should be adjudged the immigrant to these shores. (Cheers.) The tenderness of his love for his native parent land was the surest pledge that he would be as a faithful and brave husband to a loving wife to this the land of his choice. (Cheers.) And now, not wishing to keep them too long, he would, ere concluding, on this the first representative gathering of Irishmen since the assassination of Lord Cavendish and Mr. Burke—(applause and dissent)—pronounce, as they did in their heart of hearts at the moment the terrible news was flashed to our shores, their detestation of the horrible crime and criminals that had so stained the character of their country. (Cheers.) Those misguided, wretched miscreants who laid murderous hands on Cavendish and Burke, whilst staining the character of the whole of the British nation, had terribly injured the best cause of Ireland, and had estranged for a time from a land so unfortunate as to produce such monsters the feelings of the fair and liberal-minded men of England and Scotland, who were neither few in number nor weak in influence. (Cheers.) Men such as Gladstone and Bright—(interruption and "Silence," "chair")—who were a type of a large section of English opinion, and whose efforts and sincere desires to legislate in the best interests of Ireland—(applause and dissent)—could not be doubted. But of the act itself, distinct from such consequences—("What have we got to do with all this?")—they pronounced their horror and detestation both of it and its perpetrators—(applause)—and no privilege, however sacred, was worth obtaining by the sacrifice of one iota of honour, let alone such a diabolical and hideous crime—(Mr. J. E. Redmond: Hear, hear)—revolting to our common humanity, and the mere mention of it being perpetrated on Irish ground brought shame to the cheek of us all. (Applause.) The task which had been entrusted to him to perform was now finished. He felt how inadequately he had given expression to those sentiments—("No")—which to-day filled the hearts, brightened the memories, and stirred the blood of a gallant people, scattered over the whole world—(cheers)—but which people, however separated by space and fortune, and accident, united to-day to celebrate this national festival. (Cheers.) The Irishman—whether he were gifted or simple, a wise governing counsellor, or an humble subject—gave all the year but this one day to the ordinary business of life. This day he consecrated to memories. He had won his title to this indulgence by his identification of himself with all the duties of citizenship with his fellow-subjects. He asked but one thing at the hands of his fellow-colonists, and that was to give this day to thought of the dear land which had given such a lustrous roll of Statesmen, soldiers, and men of genius and patriotism to the Empire of which they were humble members. (Loud cheers.)

The toast having been duly honoured,

Mr. J. E. REDMOND (who was loudly called for, and enthusiastically cheered) responded. He said: We celebrate to-day the nationality of Ireland—(cheers)—and we celebrate it at the feast of a Christian saint. (Cheers.) It appears to me that this conjunction typifies that union, that love of country and religious feeling which forms to-day, as it has for long ages formed, the very basis of the Irish character. (Cheers.) Ireland has been called the mother of sorrows, and in truth she deserves the name; but though her history has been a history of sorrow, of disaster, and of suffering, still there have been times, there have been epochs of national glory and national triumph, which might well have been chosen as the occasions upon which to celebrate the nationality of our land. (Cheers.) The day when Owen Roe O'Neill conquered at Barburb—(cheers)—the day when the Grattan established a free Parliament upon Irish soil—(loud cheers)—aye, one of those days upon which virtuous and honorable Irishmen laid down their lives for their country—might have been chosen as the day upon which to celebrate Irish nationality. (Cheers.) But it is typical of Irish feeling and Irish natures that the day which has been chosen by the Irish race all over the world to celebrate the nationality of their land is the festival of a Christian saint. (Cheers.) Fourteen centuries ago that man trod Irish soil—that man whose festival to-day we are celebrating, and upon whose festival we are celebrating the nationality of our country. (Cheers.) I echo to the utmost limit the language which fell from the chairman with reference to the true significance of this day. This is not a day for party bitterness—(loud cheers)—or for sectarian hate. (Cheers.) We have inherited a creed and noble traditions. Let men of meaner history and baser lineage be slaves or bigots. (Loud cheers.) Noblesse oblige, we Irishmen have inherited traditions and a history which make it impossible for us, on an occasion such as this, to allow any sectarian or party feeling to prevent us from welcoming into our midst every man, no matter what his nationality or his creed, who is willing to aid in the struggle for justice to Ireland. (Loud cheers.) It has been well said that to-day all over the world this festival is being celebrated. Englishmen boast, and they boast with right, that the sun never sets on the dominion of their Queen. (Applause.) We Irishmen have a prouder boast, and it is this:—Follow the race of the sun all round the world, and wherever its rays fall you will find to-day Irish men and Irish women—(cheers)—driven, in many cases, by oppression from the land of their birth—(loud cheers)—still cherishing those feelings of fidelity to the virtues, the prosperity, and the freedom of their country which filled their hearts when they left her shores. (Cheers.) To-day in every part of the world where the foot of man has trod there are assemblies of Irish men and Irish women—(cheers)—celebrating the nationality of their land; and it seems to me that wherever, throughout the world, Irishmen to-day turn to the land of their birth they will say in the words of one of their poets—

" Where'er I roam, whatever realms I see,
My heart, untravelled, ever turns to thee."

(Loud cheers.) I esteem it as a privilege and an honour to be allowed in this assembly of Sydney Irishmen to respond to this toast. (Cheers.) Since I have come to Australia nothing has brought to my heart such feelings of gratification and of pride as the fact that here Irishmen have shown to the world that under a free constitution and with equal chances they can be as industrious, as law abiding, and as loyal—(loud cheers)—as either their English or their Scotch brothers. (Cheers.) The history of the Irish race throughout the world is a strange and a chequered one. I believe there is no parallel to it except perhaps in the history of the Jewish race. (Hear, hear.) Irishmen have gone forth into every land. They have become good citizens of every land. (Cheers.) They have achieved prosperity in every land, and they have enjoyed and have never taken advantage of the privileges of citizenship and freedom which have been conferred upon them. (Cheers.) But I assert, and you will not deny it, that the Irish race have everywhere preserved just as the Jewish race have preserved, generation after generation, the distinct individuality of the national type. (Loud cheers.) Allusions have been made to me individually. These I am bound by every consideration not only of courtesy, but also of prudence to pass by. (Hear, hear.) But this I will say, and you will not blame me for saying it, that I would rather cut out my tongue from its roots than say in this land one word, or do in this land one act, which I believed in my heart would tend to create dissension—(loud cheers)—between the colonists of Irish birth and descent and the colonists of other nationalities. (Cheers.) The most that I have asked from any Irishman in this colony is this—that proving his allegiance to the land in which he has enjoyed prosperity and freedom—proving his love for that land, and his desire to maintain her power by every means which he has at his disposal, at the same time he shall be willing to extend to those of his kith and kin who are at home, who to-day live on the plains and in the valleys that he in spite of all loves to-day—(loud cheers)—that he shall extend to them his sympathy and, where his conscience shall allow him, his support. (Cheers.) I should be sorry if any man at this table thought that in saying these words I was introducing matter which had better be left unsaid. (Cries of "No.") But I pass from this matter, and I say that I am glad and proud to know that at this table to-night there are assembled not only the men of one creed—(cheers)—because the Irish nation which I love—(cheers)—the Irish nation for which I am struggling—(loud cheers)—is not a nation of one sect, of one creed, or of one class, or of one party. (Cheers.) It is a nation composed of all that is good of every creed, of every party, of every class, and I believe in my heart that the efforts which are being made throughout the world for the regeneration of Ireland are efforts which are supported by men of almost every creed and almost every nationality. (Cheers.) On an occasion such as this it is but natural that we should as far as we can look across the 16,000 miles which stretch between us and Ireland—(hear, hear)—look across the ocean to-day, and what do you see? You see there an ancient and an honourable nation—(cheers)—a nation inheriting great and ennobling traditions—(cheers)—a nation banded together in a struggle for the achievement of what they believe to be the social and political regeneration of their land—(applause)—and in that nation you will see evidences of this fact, that through all the vicissitudes through which Ireland has passed for generations—aye, I might say with truth for centuries—there has been something deep down in the great national heart of the country which has been of sufficient strength and fidelity to show to the world that after all we have never been a conquered race. (Loud cheers.) No nation is conquered which preserves within its heart the spirit and the love of freedom. (Cheers.) In the past history of the world, as in the past history of Ireland, it has happened before now that the standards of freedom have been trampled in the dust—(hear, hear)—that the champions of freedom have been sacrificed to bigotry and oppression—(cheers)—but in no land where the love of freedom really throbs in the national heart can it be said that that nation has been conquered. (Cheers.) Henry Grattan once compared Ireland to Juliet lying in the tomb, and in truth the comparison was just. Ireland, indeed, lay weakened and prostrate, stretched in death-like trance upon the bier. Famine had wasted her form, and oppression had wrinkled her brow; but all along the vital principle of life was warm in her veins; all along the divine and immortal love of freedom throbbed within her heart. (Cheers.) I say that the impartial historian of the future will record in letters of gold the action of those men who at that time came and knelt by her side, and chafed her hands and brought her back to consciousness—(loud cheers)—who raised her up, who encouraged, who strengthened, and who defended her, and of whom I will only say this, that so far as I know them, they are prepared to leave all to the just arbiter of all things—the verdict of time and of posterity—to say that, in spite of calumnies and in spite of misrepresentation they worked upon lines which they thought honourable for a cause which they believed to be just. (Cheers.) At this moment over one portion of the land whose nationality we are celebrating there hangs the shadow of famine. Away in bleak Connemara, and in rugged Donegal, amidst her thousand mountain peaks, there is a veritable famine to-day. But in spite of that and other circumstances which to my mind are worse than famine, but of which I will be discreet and polite enough to a mixed company not to allude to—(hear, hear)—in spite of those things the Ireland of to-day is an Ireland erect and upon her feet. (Loud cheers.) A few months ago I stood amid the mountain peaks of Donegal. I stood there in what is still known as O'Neil's country. There I stood at the mouth of a cave around which a beautiful and significant tradition hangs, and it seems to me that the tradition is to-day typical of the attitude and position of the national energies of Ireland. It is said that in this cave, in the far wilds of Donegal, O'Neil and a chosen band of his horsemen lie wrapped in slumber; that they lie there year after year, generation after generation, and will only awake when the trumpet call rings in their ears to tell them of the emancipation of Ireland. (Loud cheers.) It seems to me that at the present day the national energies and national resources of Ireland are in slumber, as it is supposed are the horsemen of O'Neil; it seems to me that they will remain in slumber until there sounds in their ears the trumpet call which tells of the social and political regeneration of Ireland. (Cheers.) Then as O'Neil's horsemen they will leap into their saddles, and will ride forth through the land, and will undertake the duty of maintaining the national greatness and stimulating the national prosperity. (Cheers.) At this moment in spite of all which is against her, the Ireland of to-day is an Ireland full of hope and confidence and of courage. (Loud cheers.) I believe that at no period of the political history of Ireland for the last fifty years, has the cause of its social and political regeneration been in a more favourable position than it is at this moment. (Cheers.) I will not allude to what you, sir, alluded to—to a crime which has cast its shadow over Ireland—(hear, hear)—which upon me and upon the men with whom I am associated has this effect—that it threw back our cause a generation—(cheers)—and if our deadliest enemies had with all the ingenuity which the infernal powers could command—(cheers)—decided upon an act which would have the effect of ruining our hopes, of blasting our reputations, no greater act of villainy, no act of greater atrocity could have been committed than that to which you have alluded—(cheers); but I refuse to be drawn into any vindication of myself—(loud cheers)—or of those with whom I have been and am associated—(cheers)—and if I thought that in any allusions which you have made to that matter you were insinuating in the remotest degree that what has been stated in this land many times was true—[The Chairman: No]—that is, that either I or the men with whom I am associated were implicated even in the remotest degree of sympathy—(cheers)—with this atrocious crime, I would leave my place at this table—(cheers)—and I would resent your imputation as an insult to the common sense—(cheers)—of this audience, and to the feelings of myself—(cheers); but I know very well that was not your intention—(cheers)—and I would not have alluded to this matter were it not that there are around me—not at this moment, but in this city—vigilant and ever wakeful enemies—(cheers)—who are ready to seize upon my words when I use them, and upon my silence when I do not speak—(cheers)—as a reason for making accusations which are not believed in by the men who make them—(cheers)—and which, as I have spoken upon this subject, I must say, I believe to be a disgrace to this city, and this community. (Loud cheers.) I said that the Ireland of to-day was an Ireland full of hope and courage. I repeat it. There have been men at every period of our history who have despaired of the cause of Ireland. There have been men who have not thought the cause of Ireland worth working or fighting or dying for. (Hear, hear.) Well, we are happy in being able to say that we Irishmen who are assembled at this board are not sprung from such sires. (Cheers.) We believe in the future destiny of our land. (Cheers.) We believe that that power which rules over the destinies of every land, and which, in the history of the world, has ever rewarded the labours, the sacrifices, and the fidelity of a people—(cheers)—has in store for the Irish race a great future. (Cheers.) We believe that within the four shores of Ireland it is possible to create a powerful, a united, a prosperous, and a loyal people. (Cheers.) We believe it is possible to change Ireland from what she is to-day, undoubtedly a weak spot in the armour of England—(cheers)—into being what we hope to see her—an integral part but a free and self-governed part—(loud cheers)—of that Empire in which you, sir, enjoy a self-government which I do not believe you are willing to refuse to the five millions and a-half of people at home. (Cheers.) To those who are doubtful of the future of Ireland, to those who are lukewarm in this matter, to those who are absolutely hostile, we have this to say that we will proceed with our work, come all the world in arms against us. (Loud cheers.) With this I conclude in words written by a national poet of Ireland whose name and whose country have been identified with one of the Australian colonies, and who, speaking to the doubters, to those who sneered and who refused their help when their help was an advantage, said—

"'Hope no more for fatherland,
All its ranks are thinned or broken,'
Long a base and recreant band
Coward words like those have spoken.

But we sing a land awoken,
Fatherland is true and tried;
As their fears are false and hollow,
Slaves and traitors stand aside,
Foes to freedom, Faugh-a-ballagh!"

(Enthusiastic cheering.)

Dr. GOODE also responded.

Mr. D. O'CONNOR, in an eloquent speech, proposed "The Land we Live in." He said this toast was second to none on an occasion such as this—(cheers)—because of the extensive area and the vast resources of the country, and the grand institutions under which we lived. We were one of the most loyal people on the face of the earth—(hear, hear)—and this fact taught its own lesson when we came to remember that a large portion of the people of this colony had sprung from the land of St. Patrick. (Cheers.) In every department—in the Senate and at the Bar—some of the most distinguished men were Irishmen. (Cheers.) Some of the most remarkable men that figured in Australian history were Irishmen, and some of the most successful of our Governors were Irishmen, than whom no one maintained with higher honour the majesty of England in this colony; and among those men were Governor Bourke, Sir John Young, and Sir Hercules Robinson. (Cheers.) It would be a matter of great interest for the hon. member for New Ross in the House of Commons to relate in the old country his experiences in this distant land, where the Celt and the Saxon were vieing with each other in their desire to promote the prosperity of the country and were united and happy. (Cheers.) It might have the effect of impressing the minds of Mr. Gladstone, Mr. Bright, and other illustrious men that if Home Rule were extended to Ireland it would be far from dismembering the Empire, and would tend more to promote its power and its glory. (Cheers.) The name of Gladstone was one as dear to Irishmen as any in Ireland's long history, for he ventured to say that the great measure for the disestablishment of the Irish Church vied with the measure for Catholic Emancipation in its effects upon the Irish nation. He hoped that Ireland would become as free and as contented and as loyal as the land we live in. (Cheers.)

Mr. COONAN, M.L.A., responded.

The toasts of "The Ladies," "The Press," and "The Chairman," were then proposed, and the proceedings terminated with cheers for the Queen.

DEMONSTRATION AT BOTANY.

A demonstration under the auspices of the Irish National League was held at the Sir Joseph Banks Pavilion, Botany, on Saturday. The proceeds were devoted to furthering the objects of the League. Several thousands of persons were conveyed by trams and 'buses to the scene of the day's proceedings. The gathering was remarkably orderly, and there was an almost total absence of rowdyism and intoxication. A programme of sports afforded entertainment to a large number of people, and a concert of Irish national music was given by Mr. F. J. Hallewell, Signor Paladini, and Miss St. Clair. The principal feature, however, of the day's proceedings was an address delivered in the pavilion in the afternoon by Mr. J. E. Redmond, M.P., and the presentations of addresses and souvenirs to Mr. Redmond and some of his associates.

Mr. J. G. O'CONNOR was voted to the chair. He said this great gathering spoke well for the prosperity and good order of the people of Sydney. Their enemies, if they had any—and he did not think they had—would, after all, be only too proud to acknowledge that they misjudged the Irish colonists, and would admit that the Irishmen of New South Wales knew how to conduct themselves.

Mr. REDMOND, who was received with prolonged cheering, said it seemed that on an occasion like this speeches were almost out of place. It seemed to him that no words of his could speak so eloquently as the mighty numbers of Irish men and women assembled there—(cheers)—spoke of the determination of the Irish people of this colony and this city to assert what was their undoubted right—to prove their allegiance to the land of their birth and their affection. (Cheers.) But it would be well perhaps for him to commence his few remarks by stating a few facts with reference to the progress which his work was making in Australia. Thanks in a large measure to a certain section of the press, his work here had progressed more quickly than he ever anticipated. He had been in Australia but a few weeks, but he had already had the pleasure of sending home £1000; on Monday next he hoped to send another £1000, and after that they would still have in their hands £1000 more. (Cheers.) Within the last fortnight he had addressed eight or ten meetings in the centres of population in the western portion of this colony, and he received, not only from the Irishmen, but from all classes of the community—(cheers)—with the exception of one well-known section, a reception of which any man living might well be proud. (Cheers.) The National League had taken root already in this land; it already had a score of working branches, and already numbered its members by thousands; and he particularly wished to emphasise what he said before—that much of the success which had accompanied this work was due to the stupid and bigoted opposition which they had had to encounter. (Prolonged cheering.) Now, it would be expected from him that he would say something with reference to the meeting recently held here in opposition to them. (Cheers.) This was the first thing he had to say—that there was only one circumstance connected with the meeting which gave it even a transitory importance, and that circumstance was the fact that a disturbance was created there by some (he supposed) of his over-ardent friends and sympathisers. He wished to repeat here what he had said elsewhere, that he hoped and trusted that the Irishmen of Australia would discountenance any efforts which some amongst them might be inclined to make to interfere with the freedom of speech—(cheers)—even when, as in the case alluded to, that freedom of speech finds vent in simple unsupported calumnies and falsehoods. (Cheers.) He had said that from the bulk of the population of this colony, he had not received opposition. (Applause.) The meeting held in the Protestant Hall was a proof of his assertion. That was not a meeting of the citizens of Sydney. It was a meeting of an intolerant sect—(cheers)—a sect which which had brought into this land—to use a phrase which had been written about himself—all their Old World seed of bitterness and hatred. (Cheers.) With reference to the men who stood upon the platform in no other capacity than simply as arch-bigots, he had nothing to say except this—that their brethren at home, the Orangemen of Ireland—(groans)—would repudiate with indignation—(cheers)—and condemn the action of some of these foolish and ill-informed men who find themselves at the head of the movement here, but who, if judged by any mental or moral quality, would not be fitted to stand in the last rank. (Cheers.) An attempt had been made to make this movement here in Australia a sectarian one. He knew not whether that attempt might be successful or not, but this he did know, that at home in Ireland it was not a sectarian movement. (Cheers.) The largest meeting he ever attended in his life was held in the North of Ireland, and was presided over by an Orangeman. (Applause.) He had stood upon the Land League platform with Catholics, and Protestants, and Presbyterians, and Orangemen, and Nationalists, and he asserted that the men here who acted on behalf of the Orangemen of this country in opposition to him were taking a course which did not to-day command the approval or the sympathy of their brethren at home. (Cheers.) Beyond this he would not condescend to refer to the speeches of any of those gentlemen. But there was one man at that meeting who, as far as he knew, was the only one who had any claim to the position of a representative man. With reference to him he had little to say, but what he did say would be said rather in good humour than in indignation. (Hear, hear.) Sir Henry Parkes—(groans)—had accused him of endeavouring to sow seeds of dissension between class and class and creed and creed—(A Voice: "He has lived by it long enough himself")—but he was greatly struck the other day by some words which were spoken by a gentleman who, at that time at any rate, was not a colleague of his. He found that in 1868 the present Sir John (then Mr.) Robertson accused Sir Henry Parkes of having used all his power and all his influence and ability to do the very thing that he (Mr. Redmond) was now charged with doing—(cheers)—that was, with sowing dissension between class and class and between creed and creed. (Cheers.) Sir Henry Parkes reminded him very much of a shark without a tail. (Cheers and laughter.) They probably well knew that a shark was a very ugly and venomous sea reptile—(laughter)—that the shark was greedy, and cruel, and treacherous. (Cheers.) They knew also that if once they cut the tail off a shark he might gnash his teeth and roll his eyes, but he could do no mischief. (Prolonged cheering.) The good sense of the people of New South Wales had had the effect of cutting off the tail of this political shark—(cheers)—and his reckless and frantic exhibition of political malignity simply excited from his opponents a smile, and nothing more. (Cheers and laughter.) Sir Henry Parkes said that his (Mr. Redmond's) mission to this land was the most impudent thing he had ever heard of in a free country. He ventured to believe that its impudence had been equalled at least, if not surpassed, by Sir Henry Parkes posing here in Sydney as the defender, forsooth, of the purity of public life in New South Wales. (Prolonged cheering.) He had, although a young man, encountered more formidable opponents than Sir Henry Parkes, and he was not likely to allow his peace of mind to be disturbed, or his plans of action to be disarranged, by the abuse of a man of whom it could be said at the end of his long career that he had been in private life without honesty, and in public life without principle. (Enthusiastic cheering.) Here, on St. Patrick's Day, they were assembled for a great purpose—to give testimony of the allegiance of the Irish people to the cause of Ireland, and to the cause, above all, of Irish self-government. (Cheers.) It was to him amusing to note the manner in which the demands of the people of Ireland for self-government were met by politicians in this country. They seemed to ignore the facts which were coming day after day under their notice in the utterances of public men and responsible politicians at home. He held in his hand two quotations from the speeches of two men of high political standing in England—both of them members of the British House of Commons, and one of them a Cabinet Minister. Mr. Chamberlain, speaking the other day to an English audience, said: "Do not let us deceive ourselves. Do not let us suppose that our work is as yet complete. As long as Ireland is without any institutions of local government worthy of the name; as long as nothing is done to cultivate a sense of responsibility among the people; as long as Irishmen in their own country are deprived of the rights and privileges which are conceded to Englishmen and Scotchmen"—(Mr. Chamberlain might have added Australians)—"so long will the seeds of discontent and disloyalty remain, only to burst forth into luxuriant growth at the first favourable opportunity." (Cheers.) Mr. Herbert Gladstone, son of the Prime Minister of England, used these words: "In my opinion, the Government of Ireland is as bad as it can be. In my opinion, it is the worst-governed country to be found in Europe. Centralisation is the curse of the country. The form of Government should before long be radically reformed, and the people allowed to manage their own affairs." (Great cheering.) These were quotations from the utterances of two members of the British Government, and in the face of those opinions he asked any man of political standing here how he could have the foolishness to say that, in asking for Ireland, as they did, the same rights of self-government as were enjoyed here in Australia, they were working against the throne and in favour of dismemberment of the empire. Their claim was not a new one. It was the union with England that was new. Ireland, up to the time of the Union, possessed a Parliament of its own for 600 years. The Union, which had brought about centralisation of government, only dated from 1800. They were only asking for the restoration of their rights. They were not making a new appeal, but an appeal founded upon historic precedent. He held in his hand a list of places to which England had already conceded the right of self-government which Ireland now demanded. The list included 25 different dependencies which were now in possession of home rule. Canada, which enjoyed home rule, had set an example which the Legislatures of these colonies might well follow. Last autumn the Canadian Parliament—both Houses—passed unanimously, and forwarded to London an address to the Crown begging the Queen to concede to Ireland the same measure of self-government which she had granted to Canada. (Cheers.) The men who said that in advocating home rule he advocated the dismemberment of the Empire, levelled that charge against the people and the Legislature of Canada as much against him. (Cheers.) If granting home rule to a dependency meant dismemberment of the Empire, the Empire had been dismembered 25 times. He had one word to say with reference to that day. Their meeting there was an answer to the men who thought they could cow the national spirit of Irishmen. (Cheers.) He had to ask them to make this triumph a complete one, and he would tell them how to do so. Let every man who was listening to him enrol himself as a policeman to keep order. (Cheers.) Let not St. Patrick's Day be desecrated by disorder, or by the sight of a single man in a state of intoxication. (Cheers.) He thought their enemies were beginning to find out—and to-day would help them on the road—that they were but beating the air. He said to those men, in the name of Irishmen of Sydney—he said to those men who hoped to extinguish their nationality, who hoped to make us Australians and nothing else, that they might "as well go stand upon the beach, and bid the main flood 'bate its usual height." (Cheers.) This demand which Ireland was making was an old demand. This demand sprang from the national spirit which was tried ages ago on Irish soil. They knew the answer which their forefathers gave. Were their enemies acquainted to the old song called "The Wearing of the Green?" (Enthusiastic cheering.) Did they remember that, when Pat was told to tear the shamrock from his hat, he answered

" You may tear the shamrock from my hat, and throw it on the sod;
But never fear, 'twill take root there, tho' under feet 'tis trod."

(Enthusiastic cheering.) The spirit contained in those lines was the spirit of answer which to-day they gave to their enemies. (Cheers.) They told their enemies that they would work for this land in which they lived, and in which they enjoyed the prosperity and freedom denied to their brethren at home. They would work for this land; if necessary they would fight for this land. (Cheers.) But there was one thing they would not do for this land or any nation upon earth. They would not forget the land for which their fathers died—(cheers)—they would not forget the land where their fathers and grandfathers and generations of their families lay under the old Irish cross upon Irish soil—(cheers)—and without interfering with their allegiance to Australia, they would combine, they would work, they would labour, they would pray with all their might and all their soul, to bring about that day when their island home away in the western seas should no longer be what she was to-day—almost a mendicant at the door of every nation of the world for charity; but that within her foreshores there would be an Irish nation springing up—prosperous, orderly, and law-abiding, because prosperous and wealthy—to cultivate all those glories which illumined the annals of their forefathers, and prove to the world that the Ireland of to-day was true to the motto of their race—"God and our country." (Prolonged and enthusiastic cheering.)

Mr. WILLIAM REDMOND and Mr. W. COONAN, M.L.A., then addressed the gathering at some length.

Mr. M'INERNEY then presented Mr. J. E. Redmond, M.P., with the following address:—"Fellow-countryman,—We, a few of the Irish working-men of Sydney, beg to offer you a 'hundred thousand welcomes' to the colony of New South Wales. It gives us all the more pleasure to do so upon the present occasion, because we know that you and the great cause which you represent have received much unfair treatment from the press of this country. At any time you would have received a hearty welcome from us; but, in view of the opposition which you have received since you came to Australia, we recognise that it is now more than ever our duty to bid you a warm 'Cead Mille Failthe!' and to assure you that, come what may, we, the Irish working-men of Sydney, are and ever will be with you and your colleagues, heart and soul, in your gallant struggle to obtain for our country those necessary reforms which must be brought about before Ireland can be happy or her people free from misery and want. We also wish to assure you that we fully understand that, if we are to get reform for Ireland, we must agitate for it. We see plainly the beneficial results of the Land League agitation. We see them in the growing industries of our country, in the awakening spirit of independence and self-reliance in our countrymen, and above all we hail with joy—as the greatest achievement of the recent agitation—the decay of the unjust system of landlordism. We fully recognise the good work that has been done in the past few years, but still more fully do we see the necessity for carrying on the agitation, and we are determined to give all the support in our power towards the advancement of the Irish National League in Australia, and we beg that you will convey this information to the beloved leader of the people, Charles Stuart Parnell; to the lion-hearted Davitt, and all the other prominent workers in the cause at home. Your mission to this country will, we confidently predict, be attended with great success; for your objects—the re-establishment of an Irish Parliament for the management of Irish affairs, and the obtainment of reform of the iniquitous land laws of Ireland—are objects which will command the sympathy of all fair-minded men in this colony, irrespective of nationality. In any case, rest assured you will always have the support of us, your own countrymen, who beg of you to accept the accompanying small token of our esteem for yourself, and as a recognition of the good work you did for Ireland, side by side with your gallant colleagues in Parliament and out of it. That God may bless you, and all true sons of our dear country, is the wish of—(Signed on behalf of the Irish working-men of Sydney.)"

The address was accompanied by a gold watch and chain, for which the Irish working-men had subscribed £50.

Mr. J. REDMOND, after suitably acknowledging the address and the gift, said there were one or two remarks he wished to make, not so much for the information of this gathering as for the information of the public. It had been stated in the cablegrams that Patrick Egan, the treasurer of the Land League, had absconded with the Land League money and books. The fact was that in last October Mr. Egan ceased to be treasurer of the Land League. From that day to this he had never held any official connection with the League, and he then handed over the securities and books and vouchers to the new treasurer, Mr. Alfred Webb, a prominent commercial man, and a leading man in Dublin in the Society of Friends. The money which Egan handed over represented the balance, as shown to be in his hands by the balance-sheet which he then put forward, and which had been published in Sydney and elsewhere. That balance-sheet had been audited by Father Sheehy, John Dillon, and Mathew Harris, and found to be correct; and Justin M'Carthy, a man whose name ought to carry some weight for integrity, was the trustee in whose name the funds were invested, and he had also certified that the accounts were correct. With reference to Egan absconding, this cablegram was simply a foolish and stupid invention of the enemy. (Cheers.)

The Chairman then presented Messrs. J. E. and W. Redmond with the following address:—"Dear Sirs,—It is with no ordinary feelings we bid you welcome here to-day; and we cannot allow this happy occasion—the celebration of Ireland's national festival—to pass without wishing you a 'hundred thousand welcomes' to sunny New South Wales. When it was first announced that prominent members of the Irish National League were about to visit Australasia for the purpose of telling an o'er-true tale of the workings in Parliament and out of the patriotic party so faithfully led by the present great chief of the Irish people, Charles Stuart Parnell, we little thought that such able exponents of Ireland's wrongs, sufferings, and struggles for reform, by constitutional means, would visit our shores, and give us in such eloquent, soul-stirring, and lofty-toned language, the thrilling account of the dear old land, and her struggles for the same meed of independence as we enjoy as Australians. But, Sirs, when we learned that the gifted member for New Ross and his accomplished brother were to be the first missioners, we felt no fear as to the success of the mission, for we knew that famed Wexford never lacked patriot sons, gifted orators, and lovers of the sacred soil to tell the tale of Ireland's woes or Ireland's joys. And we knew, too, that though we are separated by vast oceans from the land of our birth, our hearts and pulse beat with as loud a throb beneath the Southern Cross in the cause of Fatherland as they did on the consecrated soil of Erin. Irish men, aye, and women too, be they where they may, are always interested in the history—past and present—of their suffering down-trodden country—

It may seem to those who know us not a little thing, this yearning we have for fatherland, but your advent amongst us cannot be a little thing while it tends to the strengthening of ties between those who left at the place we still call 'home' and the scattered sons of the Gael all over this vast island-continent; and your missions, Sirs, will have the effect of bringing about a binding of this union. The eloquent words we heard from you, when you first addressed a Sydney audience, stirred our hearts and made us determine to spare—even from our necessities—a little something to help the dear old land in her day of tribulation. We cannot close this short address without expressing to you the sympathy we feel for you on account of the treatment you have received from a section of the press; but the slanders uttered will only have an ephemeral existence, as we found some months ago that the same tactics were adopted, when your able colleague, Mr. J. W. Walshe, so ably advocated the cause of the League. And be assured that when you leave the shores of Australia you will take with you the prayers and blessings of a grateful Irish people for having assisted in the great work of reform for the land of our forefathers—'Erin-go-Bragh!' Thanking you on behalf of the Irish people of New South Wales, and wishing you and Mr. William Redmond a speedy restoration to health,—we beg to subscribe ourselves, your faithful friends."

The Chairman also presented the brothers Redmond, Mr. J. W. Walshe, and Mr. Hugh Mahon each with a handsome gold medal as a souvenir of the occasion. The chairman took this opportunity of stating that the result of the labours of Mr. Walshe and Messrs. Redmond had been the despatch of £14,000 to Ireland in aid of this movement.

Each of the recipients having suitably acknowledged the gift, the proceedings terminated with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

HIBERNIAN SOCIETY'S PICNIC.

The annual festive gathering of the H. A. C. B. S. took place at Chowder Bay on Saturday afternoon; but considering the attendance, it was not such a success as the promoters anticipated it would be. In the morning a procession started from St. Benedict's Church, and marched to the Circular Quay, headed by the Young Australian Band, and marshalled by Mr. John M'Crory, the district secretary of the society. Arrived at the Circular Quay, those who took part in the procession, to the number of nearly 400, embarked in steamers chartered for the occasion, and set out for the locale of the day's outing. The above number was greatly increased at the ground during the day, and altogether there were nearly 1000 present. There were four steamers plying to and from Chowder Bay, so that every convenience was afforded picnickers of arriving at their destination. Here numerous kinds of amusement were entered into. Dancing was carried on in the large pavilion on the ground, whilst in a smaller one Irish jigs were heartily entered into to the strains of a jolly piper and a violinist. Much enjoyment was obtained, and in order to prevent any possible disorder Sub-inspector Lenthall and a posse of police-constables were present. However, the proceedings passed off quietly and well, principally owing to the fact of the larrikin element not being allowed to enter the ground. The police were on the alert, and they pointed out any objectionable characters who applied for steamer tickets, and the latter were at once refused them. They were thus deprived of the chance of proceeding to Chowder Bay, and any who happened to elude the vigilance of the police and proceed to the picnicking ground, were transhipped to Sydney as soon as they were discovered. In the afternoon, at about 4 o'clock, the members of the picnic executive committee sat down to a luncheon provided in a large room on the ground. The president of the society, Mr. J. T. Barrington, presided, and the vice-chair was filled by Mr. P. Meaney, the vice-president. The toast of "The Queen" was proposed by the chairman, and duly honoured. Then followed the toast, "The day we celebrate," which was proposed by the vice-chairman. Mr. J. M'Crory, the secretary, responded, and in doing so he stated that the people of Ireland were now only fighting for the same thing which the people of New South Wales were agitating for, namely a revision of the land laws of the country. Mr. G. T. Ruble proposed "The Hibernian Australasian Catholic Benefit Society," and in doing so he remarked that the society had performed a great amount of good for its members. The chairman responded in appropriate terms, and then the toast of "The District Officers" was given. In returning thanks the secretary stated that the number of members of the society had increased by 250 since the last gathering, and it was now 575. The toast of "The Press" was honoured, and soon afterwards the proceedings terminated.

THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.—The latest official statistics of the Society of Friends, or Quakers, for 1882, show that in Great Britain and Ireland the total number of members is 17,977. In addition to these there are 5794 regular attenders of the Friends' meetings who are not in full membership. About 25,000 scholars, adult and junior, are regularly under instruction by the Friends, in their Sabbath schools; but very few of these become members of the society, and only about 3000 out of the 25,000 are estimated to be attenders of the Friends' meetings. This little church of 18,000 members is, however, represented in Parliament by about ten members, including Mr. John Bright, Sir J. W. Pease, Mr. Arthur Pease, Mr. Lewis Fry, Mr. Theodore Fry, Mr. George Palmer, Mr. J. N. Richardson, Mr. J. F. B. Firth, and Mr. William Fowler. There are also several ex-members of the society in the House of Commons, including Mr. William E. Forster, Alderman R. N. Fowler, and Mr. W. F. Ecroyd. The society includes one baronet (Sir J. W. Pease), and one knight (Sir John Barrington, of Dublin). Many of the principal members of large municipalities are Friends, including the present Mayors of Birmingham (Mr. William White) and of Bradford (Mr. Frederick Priestman), and Alderman Tatham, of Leeds, three times Mayor of that town. There is only one Friend in the municipality of London, Mr. Joseph Beck, of the Common Council. The annual obituary of the Society of Friends for 1882 shows, concurrently with the growing prosperity of the Friends' Provident Institution, the constantly lengthening average of life among the friends. The average life of the Friends dying in the recent successive triennial periods was as follows:—In the three years ending 1850, it was 51 years; in 1860 it was 53 years; 1870, 52 years; 1875, 54 years; 1879, 58 years; and in 1882, 58 years. The amount of the accumulated funds, on November 20 last, of the Friends' Provident Institution was £1,622,907, being an increase of more than £91,000 in the year. The society supports missionary establishments of its own in Madagascar, Syria, Palestine, and India.—Times.

In place of consulting the family physician, much trouble and inconvenience could be saved by taking a simple prescription which is always feasible, and will invariably prove efficacious, like Wolfe's Schnapps.—[ADVT.]

MONETARY AND COMMERCIAL.

SATURDAY EVENING.

In the Import market to-day the business done disclosed no special feature. The breadstuffs market is without change. Respecting the forthcoming sugar crop, the Sugar Planter says that the Queensland canes, which have yet three months to grow, are expected to yield 50,000 tons. The New South Wales crop is set down at 15,000 tons. Crops are heavy everywhere, and the yield of sugar will probably average two tons to the acre. Crushing will begin in May, and probably be general in July. At the weekly sales this morning the quantity of station produce forward was not large. The demand was good, and late prices were obtained. On the wharfs there was a fair supply of produce forward. Good samples of lucerne hay realised from £3 to £3 10s., and other qualities from £2 10s. to £3; Warrnambool potatoes, £1 to £1 5s.; maize, 2s. 8d. to 3s.

The Australian Mortgage Land and Finance Company, Limited, have received the following telegram from Messrs. Helmuth, Schwartze, and Co., London, dated 10th instant:—

"Wool.—During this month there is less animation; prices for good greasy are at par to ½d. lower; for the lower classes of greasy prices are ½d. to 1d. lower; for good combing scoured prices are well maintained; the lower classes of scoured are rather easier; for washed crossbred prices are rather higher."

The Cairnsmuir (s.) arrived to-day from Calcutta, via Melbourne, with jute goods, castor oil, and other Eastern produce.

The chief mania of the year (says the Investor's Monthly Manual) was that of the Electric Light and Power Companies, and already most of those concerns are at a discount, and some are going into liquidation. These have contributed some £7,000,000 to the year's totals. But the foreign Government loan applications represent as much as £50,400,000, including £11,600,000 for Italy, £8,900,000 for Russia, £3,000,000 Turkish Priority bonds, and nearly £3,000,000 for Buenos Ayres and the Argentine Confederation. Next in importance have been the foreign railway demands, representing £23,500,000, including the United States, Mexican, Brazilian, Argentine and other applications; while Indian railway subscriptions and Government loans stand for nearly another £12,000,000. Indeed, the Indian railway issues have been quite a feature of 1882. Home railways have required upwards of £11,000,000, apart from debenture stock sales, which do not find place in our monthly tables of new companies and capital. Colonial Government loans represent £7,400,000, covering New South Wales Cape, South Australian, Natal, Jamaica, and other applications. The Land and Mortgage companies cover another £9,500,000, the Canadian requirements being the most important, but this total also includes the British North Borneo Company, various United States cattle ranches, and similar demands. In the Canadian north-west the land fever appears, for the time, to have been a little overdone. It is worthy of remark that banking companies have issued another £8,000,000 of capital, two-thirds of that amount being taken by the shareholders of the London Joint Stock and Union of London when they adopted limited liability. Home Corporation and Harbour loans also cover about £5,700,000. In this way nearly £115,000,000 are accounted for out of the total of £145,000,000, the balance being made up of miscellaneous demands such as insurance, manufacturing, steamship, produce, and other undertakings, the whole representing a very solid mass of capital invested during the year.

The Customs receipts for to-day were as follow:—

Spirits, £796 19s. 10d.; wine (still), £59 11s. 11d.; wine (sparkling), £3 16s. 6d.; ale, porter, and beer (in bottle), £6 5s. 3d.; tobacco and snuff, £23 2s.; tea, £52 8s. 9d.; sugar (unrefined), £30; molasses, £113 8s. 9d.; dried fruits, £15 2s. 8d.; malt, £38 1s.; specific duty, £552 1s. 3d.; fisheries' royalty, £2 8s.; pilotage, £88 12s. 8d.; harbour and light dues, £33 9s. 4d.; total, £1815 7s. 11d.

The Sydney Morning Herald.

MONDAY, MARCH 19, 1883.

During the past few weeks several questions have been asked in Parliament respecting the school attendance officers. A few persons seem to wonder what these gentlemen find to do, while others appear to have doubts as to whether school attendance officers ought to be employed at all. It is quite certain that if the compulsory clauses of the Act are to be worked to any good purpose there must be truant officers, and instead of abolishing the compulsory clauses Parliament may find itself compelled to increase their stringency. It is not merely for the purpose of bringing truant children to school that attendance officers are employed. As the MINISTER explained a short time ago, these officers collect arrears of school fees, investigate applications for exemption from payment, and prosecute for recovery of unpaid school fees: but the chief business of the school attendance officers is to get children to school. To what extent they have succeeded in this may be gathered from the increase we have had in the number of children actually attending school during the last two or three years. The average school attendance in 1879 was 62,760; in 1882 it was 91,586. During last year alone no less than 36,000 cases of defaulting attendance was reported, and not far from 20,000 were taken to the courts. The entire increase in the average attendance at the schools would hardly be attributed to the attendance officers, but there can be no doubt that much of the increase is due to their efforts. It may also be taken for granted that if the machinery now employed were stopped, the result would be a very considerable diminution in the average attendance at the Public schools, and in the enrolment at other schools. The fact that so large a number of defaulters is reported shows that there is a considerable number of parents who regard the obligation to send their children to school as an unreasonable one. Many of the children who absent themselves do so, no doubt, without their parents' consent. A paragraph which we published on Tuesday last shows that many of the parents of defaulters are unaware of the absence of their children, and it is probable that if there were more frequent means of communication between teachers and parents, the number of truants might be considerably diminished.

At the same time, there is too much reason to believe that the blame for non-attendance is often attributed to children when it belongs to parents. The real reason why a large number of children do not attend school is that their parents do not want them to attend. It is also stated that almost every species of artifice is resorted to for the purpose of evading the law, which as it now stands is lax enough to be evaded in many ways. One of the commonest methods of evasion is that of going through the form of sending children to private schools. The Act has led to the establishment of a large number of these schools. It is said that in the metropolis they are to be found in almost every quarter. The Act, it need hardly be said, gives the Department no power to look into these schools or to impose any term for attendance at them. They are not registered and not inspected, and any proposal to register or inspect them would probably be regarded as an unwarrantable interference with liberty of enterprise. But there is a class of small private schools which are said to be employed not for the purpose of promoting education, but for that of preventing it. The teachers of many of these schools have no fixed rules, and keep no records. Instead of discouraging parents who wish to escape from the law, they encourage them. A child who is a few weeks or a few days at one of these schools can defy the attendance officer. In a private school, instead of attending school for seventy days in the half-year, he can attend twenty or even ten. Of course, it is the interest of private school teachers to make attendance as regular as possible, but they naturally regard irregular attendance as better than none at all; and in some instances, for the sake of nonplussing the attendance officers, they are not unwilling to accept any conditions that may be imposed. In the direction indicated many private schools are a source of mischief, and we may expect to hear that the mischief is on the increase.

The education report for last year gives about 13,500 children as the number attending the private schools of the colony. But the report gives no information, and as the law now stands it can give none, as to the amount of the attendance, or as to the quality of the teaching at these schools. At a large number of private schools the teaching is probably as good, and the attendance as regular, as at the State schools. But it is sufficiently well known that this can by no means be said of the rest. In addition to the 13,000 children who are supposed to attend private schools, there are about 20,000 who are set down as receiving instruction at home. What receiving instruction at home means in a large number of instances need not be pointed out. In addition to the 35,000 children who are described as attending private schools, or receiving instruction at home, there were, in 1881, 10,000 children of the statutory school ages who were entirely untaught. Since that time many of these have been brought into school, but there are doubtless many who have not been brought in. It is the duty of the attendance officers to see that the children who attend no school shall be brought into school, and to see that those who attend irregularly attend regularly. Their business is not to rush defaulting parents into court. The attendance officer who understands his duty will not resort to force till moral suasion fails. But, as matters stand, there is a large class of parents whom he can ply with neither force nor moral suasion. The parent who wishes to evade the attendance officer has only to make a bargain with the private school teacher. He may set the law at defiance by doing less than that. If the attendance officer has no right to make inquiries as to children who may take refuge at the private schools, he has none to make them as to children he may find in the streets. All he can do is to follow children to their homes; and, in regard to the class who most need his attention, this is often a very difficult thing to do. For the purpose of bringing children to school, the force which the law provides is in many instances quite as ineffectual as moral suasion. The penalty which the Act imposes for a first offence is 5s.; for a second offence it is £1. But no penalty can be inflicted at all until after the expiration of six months, and when a defaulting parent has received his first fine, another six months must transpire before he can receive a second. Thus, by paying a fine of 5s., an offending parent can keep himself out of the clutches of the law for 12 months. It is not surprising that under these circumstances defaulters who are convicted of breaches of the law, and who wish to employ their children for their own profit, go on refusing to keep them at school. It must be clear that when Parliament goes into the question of the abolition of school fees, it will also have to deal once more with that of compulsion.

MR. HENRY GEORGE, the American political economist, and whose work on "Progress and Poverty" intended to prove that poverty is merely due to the existence of rent, has naturally been attracted to the Irish land question, and he has followed up his general work by a smaller pamphlet especially devoted to Ireland. In this, while he runs counter to English notions, and to American notions also, he equally opposes himself to Irish notions.

He starts by supporting the dictum of Mr. Justice FITZGERALD, that the land laws of Ireland are more favourable to the tenant than those of Great Britain, Belgium, and the United States. In Ireland the power of the landlord is more limited than elsewhere, at least so far as regards rural land. Mr. GEORGE, speaking as an American, says, "It is the fashion of Land League orators and sympathising newspapers in this country to talk as if the distress and disquiet in Ireland were wholly due to British oppression, and our National House of Representatives recently passed, by a unanimous vote, a resolution which censured England for her treatment of Ireland." Mr. GEORGE denies that there is anything in the Irish land system which is essentially different from that which prevails in other civilised countries, and he asks his American readers who sympathise with the denunciations of England what the Irish landlords would lose, and what the Irish tenants would gain if Ireland were made a State of America to-morrow, and American law were substituted for English law. He answers that the gain would all be to the landlords, and the loss all to the tenants.

He finds no solution of the difficulty in the statement that Ireland is a conquered country, because England was once the same. He says: "That Irish land titles rest on force and fraud is true, but so do land titles in every country, even to a large extent in our own peacefully settled country. Even in our most recently settled states, how much land is there to which title has been got by fraud and perjury and bribery—by the arts of the lobbyist, or the cunning tricks of hired lawyers, by double-barrelled shot guns and repeating rifles." In the view he thus takes it will be seen that he differs very much from Mr. REDMOND, who has laid great stress upon the fact that the present race of Irish landowners descended from cut-throat ancestors, and that their title rested originally upon conquest. Mr. GEORGE says he sees no proof that Irish landlords are better or worse than other men would be under like conditions, while many of them are much more lenient to their tenants than the tenants are to the sub-tenants.

There is, however, one great difference between Ireland and America which he does not notice; and that is that in the former country there is much more competition for land than in the latter. In a young country like America rents must necessarily be limited whilst there is an enormous quantity of waste land, and rent, such as it is, is rather paid for proximately to railroads and markets—that is to say, for improvements—than for the raw land itself. A cultivator in Ireland has not the same choice that he would have in America. It is not because he goes under a better landlord that the Irishman succeeds in the United States or in Australia. It is because he goes where there is more elbow-room, or where his labour will fetch a higher price if he chooses to sell it.

Of course, holding his opinions, Mr. GEORGE does not believe in the Land League, or in any scheme for making tenants their own landlords. His notion is that distress will always exist where land is private property, and that if it does not do so in America or Australia it is because those countries are not filled up; but he thinks that they will fill up in time, and then that they will be as bad as Ireland. When he is referred to France and Belgium as a proof that small properties are co-existent with rural prosperity, he says that that is simply because the French and Belgian peasants do not have such long families; but then as he is a strong anti-Malthusian, this argument is in him rather inconsistent, because he will not admit that large families are a cause of poverty. He throws the blame of all social evils on rent; and yet the scheme that he propounds tends less to get rid of rent than the scheme of peasant proprietorship, because he does not abolish landlordism, but only abolishes private landlordism. He is going to have only one landlord, and that is the Government, representing the community at large. This is exactly the state of things that exists over a large part of India, and which has not been found to be inconsistent with poverty, or to be any cure whatever for social evils. Nor would consolidating all landlords into one get rid of rent, because the State might, according to his theory, live on the rental of land, as it largely does in India, and if this rental were carefully nursed, all taxes might be done away with. But he is obviously here upon the horns of a dilemma. If the rent is to be up to the full value, then the State will take out of the pocket of the farmer just as much as a landlord would do. If the land is to be leased by auction, there will be the same competition to get it that there is now; or if by valuation, or the adjudication of a Court, then just the same rent would be charged as is payable under Mr. GLADSTONE's Act. It does not matter to the tenant whether he pays his rent to an official rent-collector or to a landlord's agent. It is the amount that he has to pay that concerns him, not the person who gives him the receipt. If, however, Mr. GEORGE means that the tenant is to be protected by having farms at less than their value, then he would simply cocker up one class at the cost of all the rest, and unless sub-letting was sternly forbidden, the lucky farmers would sublet, and pocket the difference. If the land belongs to the people, it belongs to the people as a whole—to the people in Dublin as well as the people in Connemara—and it would be to the interest of the whole that the rental should be full and fair; and when a fair rent is charged, how can the mere fact that it is paid to the State prevent inequalities of fortune, and stop poverty? Paying rent to the State will not make a man get up earlier in the morning, will not make him more industrious or skilful, will not make him buy better or sell better, or drink less whisky. The sources of poverty are not to be dried up simply by changing the man to whom the rent is made payable; and so far as the Irish farmer is concerned, that is all that Mr. GEORGE proposes to do for him.

The public will be glad to hear that at the St. Patrick demonstration at Botany there was an almost total absence of rowdyism and intoxication. It would have been well if as much could be said of the demonstration at NEEDS' Rooms. Of rowdyism of the kind exhibited at the meeting at the Protestant Hall a fortnight ago there was little or none at either demonstration. The friends of the Irish National League have been accorded a freedom of speech which a handful of noisy spirits denied to their critics. That such has been the case is exceedingly creditable to that section of the community who think that they see a good deal in the Irish movement which Mr. REDMOND and his friends are unable to see. If it is impossible to take exception to the conduct of the opponents of the League, it is unnecessary to find fault with the speeches of its supporters. It would be well, perhaps, if on occasions like that of Saturday there were less impatience of honest criticism, and a smaller disposition to indulge in needless personalities. But much may be forgiven where men have persuaded themselves that they are the victims of injustice, and where they feel or imagine that they feel strongly. Upon the whole the attitude of the representative of the League furnished no serious ground for complaint. We wish that as much could be said of the attitude of at least one of the representatives of our own Government. To the toast of the Ministry the response was made by Sir PATRICK JENNINGS and Mr. COPELAND. How Mr. COPELAND acquitted himself may be gathered from the report which we publish in another column. For the sake of Mr. COPELAND himself, but much more for the sake of the public, we deeply regret that such a report has to be published. Seldom, it may be confidently said, has there been a more disgraceful deliverance from a Cabinet Minister. Had the MINISTER FOR WORKS appeared at the St. Patrick's banquet in his personal capacity such an exhibition as the one which our reporter describes would have been bad enough. It is, however, as a member of the Government, and as one of the leaders of our Parliament, that a Minister replies to such a toast as the one that brought Mr. COPELAND to his feet; and when a Minister represents the Government in the manner that Mr. COPELAND did on Saturday night, it is worth inquiring whether he ought to be allowed to represent the Government on such an occasion again. It may also be asked whether a gentleman who is capable of so far forgetting himself is entitled to a place in any Government. Scenes like the one which we have to report this morning ought to be stopped, and the sooner they are stopped the better. It is to be lamented that the worst thing about St. Patrick's Day has to be charged to a gentleman who did not claim to be an Irishman, but who did pose as a Minister of the Crown.

SIR WILLIAM FOX, formerly Native Minister in New Zealand, has been trying to enlighten England on the "Crown's right to the New Zealand Archipelago." He was led to do so because the subject appeared to him to be little understood. He said that the English press, and the gentlemen who lately went as a deputation to Lord KIMBERLEY, were decidedly in error in attaching as they did so much importance to the treaty of Waitangi, "as the basis of the relations existing between the Maoris and the British Government." The said treaty was made 42 years ago, but it appears that the Maoris have never known much about it, and they have cared less. It was spoken of by a chief called PAUL TUAHAERE at a conference held at Auckland in 1860, in language not complimentary. He said: "A hook was baited with blankets. Mr. WILLIAMS presented the bait, and the fish, not knowing what was inside, easily took it, and Mr. WILLIAMS forthwith drew out a subject for the QUEEN." The object of Sir WILLIAM FOX, in his lecture, was to show that the natives have never relied upon this treaty. Neither has the Crown, and yet quite recently a deputation of New Zealand chiefs went to England "to protest against the alleged infraction" of that treaty. The lecturer gave a detailed statement of the convention, and of the confiscation of a portion of the lands of the natives, which confiscation was the principal infraction complained of. It is almost too late now to discuss the value of old treaties, and no one can say exactly how much treaties with natives are worth when they are new. The difficulty is before us in Fiji, which has been annexed, and it will present itself over and over again long after the last of uncivilised countries have been taken, whether by discovery, or conquest, or annexation. The difficulty, the impossibility, is to get a full consent of all parties entitled to voice and vote in such matters, and if some other and better right can be set up, it is as well that it should be. Sir W. Fox thinks England should rely on two things—first that New Zealand was discovered by Captain COOK in 1769, and next that its native inhabitants have been several times conquered by British forces. These are old pleas, and in reply it may be said that sometimes circumstances alter cases. So far as New Zealand is concerned, and Australia too, it is for ever too late to dispute about the basis of England's right. If time does not condone felonies, it does make good titles. The thing required is that justice and kindness be dealt out to individual members of these decaying races; it is impossible now to treat with them in their corporate capacity.

THE Royal Commission on Defences, which sat about two years ago, suggested the establishment of a company of mounted rifles on the purely volunteer system; stating in their report that they had reason to believe that such a corps, "consisting of 100 officers and men, could be readily formed, equipped, and maintained without any cost to the country other than that of instruction, arms, and ammunition. It would be expedient," proceeded the report, "under these circumstances, for the Government to avail itself of the patriotism of the gentlemen thus stated to be willing to place their time and money gratuitously at the service of their fellow-citizens. Should the corps be raised in this manner, a valuable body would be at the command of the military authorities, in case of an attempt to land at some part of the coast remote from batteries or field-works." Whether or not the Commission were reckoning upon erroneous premises it is hard to say; but this is certain, that notwithstanding the invitation thus held forth (and to which we directed attention at the time) no sign has been made. The campaign in Egypt has, however, since prompted the establishment, or rather revival, of another branch of the cavalry service—which has attained great popularity, and is likely to rise into universal adoption—namely, the mounted infantry, raised specially by Lord WOLSELEY, and to the efficacy of which he has testified in strong terms of eulogium. Such a force consists simply of portions of existing foot regiments instructed in some elementary knowledge of cavalry drill, and trained to fight, if need be, on horseback, but utilised chiefly as skirmishers and scouts, and fulfilling all the functions of mounted rifles. The new system has so highly commended itself, not only in the regular but the auxiliary forces, that many rifle companies are organising mounted contingents, and new and unexpected vitality has been infused into the mounted volunteer service in England and Scotland, where, owing to the numerous yeomanry regiments, and the expense of equipment, it had almost expired. Now, this is a cavalry organisation which could, without difficulty, and at a merely nominal expense, be raised in the colony. It will be observed that the bugbears of additional establishments and extra outlay are both avoided. The men are selected from existing battalions of infantry, and are clothed and equipped in precisely the same manner as their dismounted comrades; except, of course, that they are provided with the accoutrements and weapons necessary for horsemen. Very many members of our country rifle corps are probably possessed of serviceable horses, and would most likely be willing to place their animals at the disposal of the Government for such a purpose as this, the novelty and exercise of the drill constituting in themselves a strong inducement. At the present time, when the annual Easter encampment and consequent concentration of all our forces is so close at hand, the period seems appropriate to ventilate the subject, which may be commended to the consideration of the military authorities. It is somewhat singular that "dragoons" (who are said to have been first raised by Marshal BRISSAC in the year 1600 for service in Louis XIV.'s campaigns) were originally soldiers trained to fight equally on foot or on horseback, the designation taking its origin from a dragon, or fire-spouting monster, being worked upon the muzzles of their carbines.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

OUR cablegrams of this morning contain many items of great interest. It will be seen that further attempts to destroy public buildings in London with dynamite have been made, but as yet the perpetrators have escaped detection. The last effort was to destroy the new Government offices in Parliament-street. The basement of the Local Government Office was destroyed; huge blocks of masonry were hurled a considerable distance, and the windows of all the houses within a radius of 100 yards were shattered. Happily there was no loss of human life. A cruel attempt was made to take the life of Lady Florence Dixie, whose benevolence has made her name popular. Two men attired as women attacked her ladyship with daggers, but their murderous intents were frustrated by the arrival of timely interposition. Affairs at the Transvaal appear to be in a very unsettled state. The policy of the Imperial Government in regard to South Africa was challenged by the late Chief Secretary for Ireland in the House of Commons, but apparently without effect. From France, we learn of the arrest of more leaders connected with the anarchist organisation. The London-colonial wool sales are progressing. Out of 258,000 bales catalogued, 21,000 have been withdrawn. The prices of greasy and combing merinoes rule from ½d. to 1d. below the December rates.

A RETURN has recently been issued by order of the Legislative Assembly, showing that the actual revenue received for land alienated under the Land Laws of 1861, and subsequent Amending Acts, up to the end of last year, after allowing for refunds, was £25,807,359, and the approximate cost of such alienation was £1,100,281; thus leaving the sum of £24,707,077 for approximate net proceeds. The following are the items given under the head of revenue:—Sales: Sales by auction, £9,930,205 8s. 10d.; selections after auction, £1,821,861 0s. 7d.; provisional pre-emptive rights, £51,121 9s. 7d.; improved purchases, £1,115,152 4s. 6d.; deposits, conditional purchases, £1,131,658 3s. 6d.; instalments, conditional purchases, £501,958 7s. 2d.; balances, conditional purchases, £752,523 5s.; interest on land conditionally purchased, £1,686,930 10s. 11d. Pastoral Occupation: Rents of annual leases, runs, &c., £4,867,042 9s. 6d.; miscellaneous receipts, £315,521 8s. 3d. The items of approximate cost are given as follow:—Secretary for Lands: Department of Lands, head office, including Conditional Land Sales Branch, £469,103 16s. 6d.; survey of lands, £2,997,518 1s. 4d.; land agents, appraisers, and others, £269,812 10s.; occupation of lands, £331,511 13s. 5d.; miscellaneous service, £41,272 11s. 3d.

IT will be noticed by reference to an advertisement in another column that an alteration which will meet the convenience of many passengers has been made in the arrangements of the P. and O. Steam Navigation Company. On and after the 13th June one of the company's vessels will go direct from Port Said to London, via Marseilles, not calling at Malta or Gibraltar.

THE passengers and crew of the steamship Menmuir, with the exception of the Chinese whose destination was Queensland, were liberated from quarantine on Saturday and brought up to town. The Chinese on board the Faraway were very much excited at seeing some of their countrymen leave the station while they were detained, and at one time it was feared that violence would be resorted to. Indeed they threatened to break quarantine if they were not permitted to leave; and it was only in consequence of a direct promise that they would start for their destination on Tuesday, and the presence of a body of police, who were despatched from Sydney immediately that affairs assumed a threatening aspect, that the dissatisfied Celestials were brought to their senses.

THE question of railway communication in the Clarence and Richmond River districts has been prominently before the notice of the public lately, by reason of the tour which was made a week or two ago by Sir Henry Parkes, and in another column will be found the results of the surveys which have just been completed between Grafton and Tenterfield, Tabulam and Casino, and Grafton and Glen Innes. It will be seen that with regard to the country passed through, the gradients and curves, and the cost, the route to Tenterfield appears to be of a nature far more favourable than that to Glen Innes. The people in the districts which will be benefited by this railway are impatient for the work of constructing it to begin, as the want of suitable means of communication affects in no small degree their progress and prosperity.

SIR CHARLES LILLEY, Kt., the Chief Justice of Queensland, accompanied by his eldest son, Mr. Edwyn Lilley, barrister-at-law, arrived in Sydney by the Governor Blackall last Friday, and is staying at the Australian Club. He is, we understand, starting to enjoy in the old country a well-earned 12 months' holiday, and will leave Sydney by the San Francisco boat on Thursday next.

THE Hawkesbury autumn meeting was brought to a conclusion on Saturday in the presence of about 2000 persons. A very moderate field went to the post for the principal event of the meeting, the Autumn Handicap, for which Willeroo was a very firm favourite. The race was far from being interesting, and the places were filled by Ad Valorem, Sardonyx, and Willeroo. Some of the other races were closely contested. A full report of the proceedings will be found in another column.

THE foundation stone of a convent, to be used as a residence for the teachers employed in St. Benedict's Roman Catholic School, Abercrombie-street, was laid by the Archbishop yesterday afternoon. Subscriptions amounting to about £200 were either received or promised. While the ceremony was proceeding a rather untoward event happened. A portion of the platform, which was occupied by Archbishop Vaughan and a number of clergymen and others, suddenly gave way, but without inflicting any severe injuries upon anyone. A few minutes later the remainder of the platform collapsed, creating a considerable amount of surprise, but doing no harm. A fuller report will appear in a future issue.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY was celebrated by Irish colonists by several demonstrations, the most notable being the gathering at Botany and the banquet at Needs' rooms. Mr. J. E. Redmond made a lengthy speech on each occasion in reference to Ireland and Irish troubles, and was well received. At Botany both he and his brother were presented with addresses. There was no rowdyism at any of the public gatherings.

THE third annual exhibition of the Art Society of New South Wales will be opened at 10 a.m. to-day at the Town Hall, and will remain open during the week. Visitors can obtain admission between the hours of 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. and 7 p.m. and 10 p.m., and the merit of the exhibition is such that really it should be liberally patronised. At the private view on Saturday, speeches were delivered by Mr. E. Combes, president of the society; and the Hon. Sir Patrick Jennings, Vice-President of the Executive Council; and subsequently the art union was drawn.

MR. P. R. HOLDSWORTH delivered, at the School of Arts, on Saturday evening, in connection with the Sydney Mechanics' Technical College, a lecture, entitled "A Glimpse of Italy." As a preliminary, the lecturer briefly referred to the literary and scientific conversazione which will be held on the 21st instant to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the founding of the School of Arts. He then, in an able and interesting manner, handled his subject. A synopsis of the lecture has already appeared in the Herald. The hall was crowded to overflowing by an audience who were demonstrative in their approval.

A MOST interesting lecture, addressed to Public school teachers, on "The Place of Physiology in Education," was delivered in the hall of the School of Arts on Saturday morning, by Mr. E. P. Field, at the invitation of the Hon. G. H. Reid, Minister for Education. The room was crowded with the teachers and the public, and Mr. Field was heartily applauded throughout the lecture, which was delivered in a popular style, without the introduction of technical terms, and illustrated by very intelligible models and diagrams. The object of the lecture was to advocate the teaching of the elements of physiology in all the schools of the colony. At its conclusion Mr. Reid, who occupied the chair, stated that he fully concurred with the lecturer in his idea of the vital importance of the subject, and expressed his desire that it should be made part of the ordinary curriculum in our primary schools.

THE tenth annual session of the Grand Council of the Protestant Alliance Friendly Society of Australasia, was held in the Protestant Hall, Castlereagh-street, on Monday, 12th instant, commencing at 10 a.m.; the Worshipful Grand Master, Bro. Geo. Gibson, in the chair. The roll of officers and representatives was called, only a few lodges being unrepresented. The chairman, in his opening address, stated that since last session considerable progress had been made in members and funds, and that the society was in a prosperous condition. The result of last year's returns showed a large increase both in city and country lodges. From the Grand Executive's report, which was unanimously adopted, we learn that the strength of the society was, at the close of the year, 48 lodges with about 3000 members, and with a total revenue of £15,960. The number of deaths during the past year have been 40, viz., 26 males and 14 females, and funeral donations were paid to the amount of £930. The balance-sheets and auditors' report were read and adopted. From these it appears that the funds in the Post-office Savings' and New South Wales Banks to the credit of the Grand Council amounted to £4128 16s. 4d., showing an increase of £710 14s. 0d. The grand trustees' report was read and adopted. After the usual business of the session had been disposed of, the nomination and election of officers for the ensuing year took place:—Bro. J. V. Wiley duly elected worshipful grand master; Bro. S. Baylis duly elected deputy grand master; Bro. T. J. Iredale, grand secretary, re-elected unopposed; Bro. Alex. Wilson, grand treasurer, re-elected unopposed; also, Bro. Edward Brown, grand chaplain, re-elected unopposed; Bro. R. B. Howe No. 5, and Bros. James Perry and W. Foskett No. 25, were duly elected officers of the Grand Executive Council, and Bros. E. M. Clarke, G. H. Johnston, and J. Wheeler were duly elected grand auditors for the ensuing term. The officers elect were installed in their respective offices by Bro. J. D. Morris, assisted by Bro. James Wilson, of Newcastle, past grand masters. They, in suitable and appropriate sentiments, thanked the brethren for the honours conferred. Votes of thanks were given to the retiring officers and grand trustees, and responded to in a warm and enthusiastic manner. A large amount of business was transacted affecting the interest and welfare of subordinate branches. The grand chaplain having read the closing ceremony, the sessional business was successfully terminated by the brethren and visitors singing the National Anthem.

MR. ALEXANDER DEAN, builder, and his employees held their annual picnic at Clontarf on Saturday. A steamer was chartered for the occasion, and made two trips to and from the pleasure ground. The company consisted of about 300 ladies and gentlemen. The arrangements made to secure the enjoyment of the employees and their friends, as well as the friends of Mr. Dean, were of a very complete nature. The customary sports were indulged in, including cricket, quoits, football, tug-of-war, &c. The dancing pavilion, where excellent music was supplied by the Prince of Wales Band, was well patronised. At the luncheon the toasts of "Her Majesty the Queen," "Mr. and Mrs. Dean and Family," "The Employees, coupled with the names of the foremen, Messrs. Laird, Graham, and Jones," and other sentiments, were honoured. In proposing the second toast, Mr. A. Kethel, J.P., referred in eulogistic terms to the character of Mr. Dean, and to the quality of the work turned out of that gentleman's establishment. Mr. Dean, in responding to the toast, said that it was now within a few months of 27 years since he started business. He was pleased to be able to say that during the whole of that time he had never had any financial crisis or difficulty, and that they—he and his workmen—had always done their work in such a way that they were never ashamed to look any customer in the face. He referred to the admirable relations existing between himself and his employees, and to the fact that there was not one of his foremen who had not been in his employment for upwards of 20 years.

THE St. James' School Church, at Croydon, was formally opened on Saturday afternoon, the Very Rev. the Dean of Sydney conducting the service. There was a large attendance, all the seats being filled. The building is very plain in its construction—a simple rectangular room, 50 x 25, seated to accommodate about 200. It is well lighted and ventilated by three windows at each end, and six in each of the side walls. The architects were Messrs. Blacket and Son, and the cost, exclusive of furniture and gas fittings, was about £1020. The block of ground on which the building has been erected measures 218 feet by 140 feet, and was purchased some time ago for £900. It is intended eventually to erect a larger edifice for the church, when the present one will be used as a Sunday-school only. The district will be taken charge of by the Rev. Samuel Fox, formerly incumbent of Picton and The Oaks.

THE Rev. James Jefferis, prior to commencing his sermon at the Pitt-street Congregational Church last night, thus made reference to recent proceedings in the Legislative Assembly:—"I have often questioned with myself how far the Christian pulpit should deal with politics. With all ordinary matters of government the Christian minister has nothing to do, save to lay down those divine laws of righteousness and equity which are binding upon rulers as well as people; but ought the ministers of God to be silent, either for shame or for fear of censure, when in our national Assembly laws acknowledged to be binding by the common conscience are trampled under foot, when drunkenness, the great vice of the land, is excused as a mere infirmity, when the bearing of false witness is defended as a lawful device for securing election, and when the mere confession that a wicked slander was a deliberate lie, is deemed sufficient apology to honorable members thus grossly defamed. Our representative institutions are among the best that freedom has yet discovered for the work of government, but if Parliament purge not itself from infamy like this, what can issue but the treating of these institutions with contempt? If conduct so flagitious cannot be proceeded against by Parliamentary law, yet common law will declare it, as I now in the name of this Church declare it, high crime and misdemeanor against the commonwealth."

WHILST the Messageries Maritimes steamer Melbourne was on her voyage from Noumea to Sydney a passenger named Joseph Liprandi died from what is supposed to be sunstroke. He is said to have been a resident of one of the South Sea Islands. Whether he was married or single could not be ascertained. He was buried at sea on the day of his death, the 14th instant.

AN accident of a painful character, and attended with fatal results, happened at about half-past 11 o'clock on Friday night to Mr. Robert James Fox, licensee of the Theatre Royal Hotel, Liverpool-street. Mr. Fox had retired to his room on the night in question, and, being indisposed, he proceeded, as he thought, to take a dose of medicine. Taking up a bottle from a washstand, he poured some of the contents out in a tumbler and drank them, and he then discovered that he had made a mistake and had taken a dose of carbolic acid. His daughter, a girl 13 years of age, saw what her father had done, and she informed her mother, who at once called in medical aid, but it proved of no avail, and Mr. Fox expired shortly afterwards from the effects of the acid. At an inquest held on Saturday afternoon a verdict was returned that death resulted from the effects of a dose of poison, taken in mistake for medicine.

A FATAL accident happened in Woolloomooloo Bay at about a quarter past 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Constable M'Lean and two brothers named John Cain and Horace Cain proceeded out in the bay in a boat, the two former rowing. Horace Cain asked M'Lean to allow him to take his place, and the latter consented. He then attempted to pass him, and in doing so he overbalanced himself and fell out of the boat into the water, and instantly disappeared. He was never seen to rise again. The water police were at once communicated with, and search was made for the body, but without success. The deceased, who was about 30 years of age, was a plumber by trade and a single man. It was said that he could swim. The body will be dragged for again to-day.

THE Australasian Trade Review says that the estimated population of Victoria on 31st December, 1882, was 906,223, an increase of 22,901 for the year. For New South Wales the figures are 817,469, an increase of 36,203. At the respective ratios of increase, New South Wales is reckoned to outstrip Victoria in the matter of population in the course of six years.

IN our law report, in Saturday's Herald, the action of Evans v. Gunning was described as that of a squatter against a selector, for trespass; it was an action by a selector against a squatter.

THE APPROACHING CALCUTTA EXHIBITION.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

MELBOURNE, SUNDAY.

A deputation representing the Chamber of Commerce and Manufacturers waited upon Mr. Service, the Premier, on Saturday, for the purpose of requesting the Government to take steps to provide for the adequate representation of the colony at the approaching Calcutta Exhibition.

Mr. Service inquired if the exhibition was not somewhat of a private character. Mr. Walpole, who is acting here on behalf of the undertaking, explained that the Government of India had promised to provide the principal buildings, and that general committees had been formed at Madras, at Bombay, and in Bengal; and that there was an executive committee of 18 members, of which the Lieutenant-Governor was chosen as president.

In reply to a question from Mr. Service, Mr. Walpole admitted that if any profit arose from the undertaking, it would be taken by Mr. Joubert, who would erect the annexes and manage the exhibition. In reply to another question by Mr. Service, Mr. Walpole said a charge was to be made for space; but 10,000 feet, which was all this colony would require, would only cost £420.

Some of the members of the deputation urged that it was important in the interests of the colony that Victoria should be adequately represented at this Exhibition. Eventually, at the suggestion of Mr. Service, it was decided to appoint a committee of practical men, who would prepare for the Government an estimate of the expenditure required on the part of the Government.

The walls and floors of the Houses of Parliament trembled.

DYNAMITE OUTRAGES IN LONDON.

LONDON, MARCH 17.

Up to the present time no clue has been obtained to the actual instigators of the explosion of dynamite last evening at the Local Government Board, Whitehall, and the Times Office, Blackfriars; consequently no other arrests have been made by the police. The Government have offered a reward of £1000 for the discovery of the author of the outrages. Precautionary measures are being taken to prevent a recurrence of similar attempts, and the sentries and police on duty at the Houses of Parliament and various Ministerial offices have been doubled.

NEW YORK, MARCH 17.

Sheridan, who is still here, has made a statement leading to the belief that the explosions of dynamite in London are the outcome of an organised scheme of vengeance and terrorism, and he declares that they are but the forerunners of other acts of a similar character.

VICTORIA.

MELBOURNE, SUNDAY.

Saturday was observed as a public holiday. A grand national fete and a demonstration was held under the auspices of the St. Patrick's and Hibernian Societies in the Friendly Societies' Gardens, which were largely attended. The proceedings commenced by a public procession this morning, which traversed the principal streets. The procession, which was of great length, included half a dozen bands, and as each successive band reached the Treasury, it halted and played the National Anthem. The sports were largely attended, as also was the grand national concert given in the Town Hall in the evening. The various theatres were also well filled. Large numbers of people attended the Amateur Regatta, held on the Upper Yarra. The school race was again won by the Geelong Grammar school; the maiden fours, by the Yarra Yarra Club; the maiden eights and senior fours by the Victoria Club.

Dr. W. Garrard, who arrived in Melbourne over 60 years ago, is dead. He was formerly resident surgeon of the hospital. His wife died a week ago.

Mr. M'Intyre, M.L.A., has declined to accept the position of treasurer of the National Liberal League, which was formed on Friday night. He states he was nominated for the office without his knowledge or consent.

The Telegraph Department are experimenting with aerial cables, with a view to remedying the present unsightly appearance of the principal streets, owing to the constantly increasing network of telegraph wires. Two pieces of cable—one carrying 30 and the other 14 wires—have been stretched over a short distance, and so far work well.

Mr. Leslie Alexander Moody, formerly shipping-master and chief inspector of distilleries and immigration agent, died on Saturday, at his residence, South Yarra, after a short illness, from inflamation of the lungs. Mr. Moody came to Australia over 48 years ago. He was born in Newtown, Limavaddy, in 1818, and when 20 years of age, being in delicate health, came to Sydney, intending to return to Ireland. Finding the climate of New South Wales agree with him, however, he decided to remain, and commenced his Australian career as a clerk in the Sydney Marine Insurance Company's Office. He afterwards obtained an appointment as treasurer to the Sydney District Council, and in June, 1846, he came to Melbourne. On the 8th January, 1878 (Black Wednesday), and when within a few months of being entitled to his pension, Mr. Moody's services as a Government officer were dispensed with. He leaves a family of four daughters and two sons.

QUEENSLAND.

BRISBANE, SUNDAY.

St. Patrick's Day, although kept a close holiday by the Government offices and banks, was very partially observed by the business houses in the city. There was very little in the way of outdoor amusements. A banquet was held in the evening, in honour of Ireland's patron saint, and it was largely attended by the leading Irishmen and other citizens. Dr. O'Doherty was the chairman. The toast of her Majesty the Queen and the Royal Family was well received, and the National Anthem was played. The company broke up at a late hour, after a very pleasant convivial evening.

The Premier was banqueted at Nanango on Saturday evening by a number of the leading residents. In replying to the toast of his health, Sir Thomas M'Ilwraith spoke strongly in favour of the transcontinental railway, and urged the impossibility of the colony continuing to borrow for purposes of railway extension. His remarks were very well received.

A young man named Frederick Woodley, a new arrival, and a child named Arthur Roscoe, only five years old, whilst fishing together at the North Quay, met with their deaths by drowning on Saturday afternoon. The little boy Roscoe fell into the river, when young Woodley, who was unable to swim, immediately jumped in after him, and both were drowned before assistance could be rendered them. Woodley's body was recovered by the police the same evening. The body of the child has not been found.

Constable Galligan was brutally assaulted and seriously injured on Friday afternoon by three roughs, one of whom he was attempting to arrest.

A farmer named Salisbury was thrown from his cart by his horse bolting on Friday evening. Salisbury, who fractured his skull, died in the hospital in a few hours after his admission.

The weather is showery.

ADELAIDE, SUNDAY.

By a fire at Gladstone a farmer named Hill lost 150 bags of wheat, a stack of hay, all the implements, the fencing, and the outhouses. His loss is estimated at over £500. Nothing was insured.

A fire broke out in a house occupied by Mrs. Tregloan, in Taylor-street, Kadina. The crowd soon helped to extinguish the flames, which was fortunate, as a large block of buildings adjacent must otherwise have been consumed.

The weather to-day has been very oppressive. There has been a hot wind blowing nearly all day, with clouds of dust. A slight change set in in the evening.

The annual wayzegoose given by the proprietors of the Adelaide Register was held on Saturday at Mount Barker.

THE POLITICAL SITUATION IN VICTORIA.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

MELBOURNE, SATURDAY.

All the members of the Ministry who had seats in the Legislative Assembly—with the exception of two—have been returned unopposed. Saturday was the last day for receiving nominations. Mr. Alfred Deakin, the Commissioner for Public Works and Minister for Water Supply, is opposed at West Bourke by Sir Bryan O'Loghlen, and the Hon. G. D. Langridge, Commissioner of Customs, is to be opposed by Mr. James M'Kean, the late member for North Gippsland. The latter, addressing a meeting of his supporters at Collingwood on Saturday evening, stated the reason he came forward to oppose Mr. Langridge was because in the coalition Government the Conservative element preponderated, there being six Conservatives and only four Liberals; also because Mr. Berry had not made the best use of the talent at his disposal. Mr. M'Kean thought Mr. Langridge unfit to hold the position of Commissioner of Customs, which would be much more capably filled by Mr. Mirams.

Mr. Gillies, the Minister for Railways, attended the political meeting convened at Essendon on Saturday night, for the purpose of hearing the views of Mr. Deakin, who is seeking re-election as Commissioner for Public Works. At the conclusion of Mr. Deakin's speech, Mr. Gillies replied at some length to the arguments which had been urged against the coalition. He referred to the Sir James M'Culloch, Heales, Kerford, and Francis coalitions to show that there had been at least quite as extraordinary coalitions as the present one in the colony before, when parties were so evenly balanced and all burning questions were practically settled. The present coalition was a duty of Parliament in order that practical questions might be legislated upon, and he said it would have been useless for the Conservative party to have formed an independent Ministry at the present time; for in Parliament the Ministry would have to live on the support of only half-a-dozen gentlemen, who themselves would live on their necessities, and would desert them in the hour of need. Before concluding his speech, Mr. Gillies made a rather startling announcement respecting the financial arrangements of the Railway Department, which he has to administer. He remarked that it was provided that of the £4,000,000 loan floated the other day, £2,650,100 should be applied to the construction of new lines; but there were certain recoups to the Treasury which would reduce the amount to £1,851,850; but before the loan was floated at all the late Government gave orders for extra rolling stock for the permanent way, for material alterations to the stations, and for the erection of workshops. The sum of £1,138,150 would be required to defray these works, and the balance left for the construction of new railways would therefore be only £713,750. Then £164,400 would be required to complete the railway lines already authorised, so that there was thus only £549,300 left for the construction of the 800 miles of railways that Mr. Bent proposed in his bill. This was done not in ignorance, but with eyes open, for the attention of the Minister all the time was directed to it by the permanent officers of the Department. The exposure made by Gillies created a profound impression on the meeting.

Sir B. O'Loghlen, who was defeated for West Bourke at the late general election, and who is now opposing the re-election of Mr. Alfred Deakin, the Commissioner for Public Works, in the same electorate, addressed a meeting of the electors yesterday evening at Flemington. The hall was full, there being about 250 persons present. Sir Bryan obtained a favourable reception, and entered into a lengthy reply to the speech delivered by Mr. Service the previous night at Castlemaine. He controverted the Premier's statements with regard to the financing of the late Government during the last 18 months, which, instead of being "deplorable," as Mr. Service had asserted, was highly creditable, having resulted in wiping out £51,000 deficit and leaving a credit balance. He maintained that the floating of the loan was a pronounced success, and referred to the present Coalition Ministry as farcical, impracticable, and unprincipled. He charged the new Government with having stolen to a great extent his own policy. Mr. T. Bent, the late Commissioner for Railways, also addressed the meeting. A motion was proposed that the candidature of Sir Bryan O'Loghlen was an insult to the constituency, and great uproar, which the chairman was unable to suppress, then arose, which lasted to the close of the meeting. Mr. Bent, however, called for a show of hands in favour of a vote of confidence, when about two-thirds of those present held up their hands in favour of Sir Bryan.

FATAL AFFRAY NEAR WARRNAMBOOL.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

MELBOURNE, SUNDAY.

The Indian servants employed by Mr. T. Palmer at his Tooram Estate, at Allansford, seven miles from Warrnambool, mutinied on Saturday night, and in endeavouring to quell the disturbance one of the Indians was shot by Mr. Palmer. Some months ago Mr. Palmer engaged 28 coolies for the purpose of working his cheesemaking industry, some of these being utilised for domestic purposes. These coolies were of mixed creeds, eight being Afghanists and the remainder Cabulese, and they are very prone to quarrel amongst themselves. About 6 o'clock on Saturday evening the coolies broke out into open rupture, and soon were fighting in a terrible manner, a considerable amount of blood being shed. The men were fighting desperately, using spears and heavy waddies. Mr. Palmer discovered that the coloured overseer was the chief object of their attack, and seeing he was in danger of being killed, he took a revolver, and, proceeding to the milking yard where the fighting was going on, he tried first to intimidate them by firing the revolver over their heads, but one of them, Sirdir Khan, came to the melee and rushed at his master with a weapon. In self-defence Mr. Palmer fired at him, and the coolie fell mortally wounded with three bullets in the region of the abdomen. The stricken man was then removed by his comrades to a hut on the estate, where they all reside. After this deed matters became somewhat quieter. Meantime a messenger was despatched to Warrnambool for the police, who soon after arrived. Some of the officers remained at the estate through the night. Though there was much noise in the coolies' hut, no further fighting occurred. Medical assistance was obtained for the man who was shot, but his case was hopeless, and he expired before midnight. Several of the coolies had fearful scalp and face wounds inflicted in the melee. The police are still on duty at the estate, Mr. Palmer being under surveillance. An inquest on deceased will be held to-morrow.

RAILWAY EXTENSION IN WESTERN AUSTRALIA.

PERTH, SATURDAY.

The commission appointed to consider Mr. Anthony Hordern's railway proposals are said to have concluded their labours, and it is rumoured that their report will be altogether in favor of that part of the scheme which deals with a railway from the eastern districts to Albany, but that with regard to any further extension northwards they do not consider it advisable to offer an opinion at the present time.

DISCOVERY OF HUMAN REMAINS.

[By Telegraph.]
(From our own correspondent.)

ADELAIDE, Sunday.

This evening some boys were playing on a sandhill at Kew, when one of them found a human skull in a hole which appeared to have been scratched by a dog. A person named Manning was informed of the occurrence, and he, digging in the sand, found the body of a boy who, in appearance, answers the description of a lad named Grimes, who mysteriously disappeared from his home at Glanville in the middle of April last year. The sandhill where the body was found is near a fence of the back yard of a house where Grimes lived. On Sunday, April 16, young Grimes was sent to the Baptist Church, and was afterwards seen on the Military-road, but was never subsequently heard of, although search parties scoured the Peninsula, and every place where it was thought he might have gone. The creeks and water-holes were dragged, and the other colonies were communicated with, and a reward was offered for his discovery by the Government. It is believed that the boy became tired, and lay down on the sandhill, where he went to sleep, and was smothered by the drift sand.

THE NEW RUSH AT BILLY'S LOOKOUT.

TEMORA, Saturday.

The statement that seven claims had struck gold at the new rush is not yet confirmed. Reliable news was received to-day that five claims along the line of leads—the same being on each side of the prospectors—are on gold, and one claim off the prospectors'. It is stated that the lead is narrow and not very rich, and does not seem likely to run a long distance. The best claims will only pay wages. No one should go who cannot afford to spend two months in prospecting. The distance via Cootamundra, Temora, and Barmedman is at least 40 miles less than via Murrumburrah, Young, and Marsden. There is also a better road, and a regular coach is plying by the former road.

YOUNG, Saturday.

People returned from Billy's Lookout give a most discouraging report of the prospects of gold-finding. The diggers regard themselves as having been deceived by false telegrams. Lake Cowal is dry.

PARKES, Saturday.

Numbers are leaving here for Billy's Lookout, near Marsden. Coulson and party's claim in Coobang paddock is looking well. There is plenty of gold to be seen in the stone. The other adjacent claims have a good show.

CARCOAR, Saturday.

Rowe and party have just finished crushing 70 tons of quartz, realising 74oz. 6dwt. gold. At the Energetic battery, Gully Swamp, from the ground known as Rowe's Paddock, their reef averages 2 feet wide. There are now several other payable claims in that neighbourhood. Many prospecting parties are engaged in its vicinity. At Mount Macdonald 10 tons from the Association paddock realised 18oz. of gold. The Queen of the Mount is now engaged raising stone from the 150-feet level.

Mr. A. P. Wood reports the yields of Victorian mines for the week ending March 17 as follows:—"Australasian, 339oz. gold; Black Horse United, 51oz.; Dyke's Freehold, 160oz.; Lone Hand, 281oz.; Loughlin, 176oz.; Madame Berry, 503oz.; Ristori, 498oz.; Duke (Timor), 323oz."

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE AT DENILIQUIN.

[By Telegraph.]

DENILIQUIN, Saturday.

A disastrous fire broke out in Cressy-street, at about a quarter past 7 o'clock this evening, at the premises occupied by Mrs. Atkinson as a drapery establishment. At about the hour named Mrs. Atkinson was standing at the front door of the shop, which was well lighted as is usual on Saturday night, talking to a customer. During the conversation the customer called her attention to an unusual glare proceeding from the back of the counter. Both rushed into the shop, and it was then seen that a litter of loose papers had kindled, and was rapidly communicated to the inflammable dressmaking and millinery material which was adjacent. An effort was made to extinguish the flames, but in a few moments they had extended all over the shop, and it was then seen they had no chance of saving either the building or the stock. Both Mrs. Atkinson and her customer then escaped precipitately from the shop, and the alarm was given. The flames spread with remarkable rapidity, and in a few more minutes a boot shop and then a chemist's shop on the right were in flames, and almost immediately afterwards the Globe Hotel, on the left, was in a similar difficulty. By this time a good crowd of spectators had gathered, but it was impossible for them to render any assistance through the fierce glare and heat of the conflagration. In less than a quarter of an hour after the alarm had been given a contingent of the fire brigades with the engine, reel, and hose commenced operations, and in a short time subsequently a hydrant with more hose was brought from the Deniliquin and Moama railway station. With this latter the water laid on from the partially completed waterworks was tapped, but the pressure was insufficient. The fire-engine, manned by willing volunteers, was equal to the occasion, and in about three-quarters of an hour after the alarm was given all danger was over. Two streams of water, however, were kept playing on the ruins for a considerable time, but the fire is still smouldering. The actual damage consists of the destruction of the Globe Hotel, Mrs. Atkinson's millinery establishment, a boot store belonging to Mr. Atkinson, and a chemist's shop belonging to Mr. Glyde. The Globe Hotel was insured in the Norwich Union for £1800, and the other buildings in the same office for about £700; the stock in the millinery establishment for £1100 in the National Insurance Company of New Zealand, and the chemist's for £750 in the Victoria. The boot shop and furniture in the Globe Hotel were also insured, but no particulars are available. The origin of the fire is a mystery. It is supposed to have originated through the bursting of a lamp in the millinery window, but there is no definite information on the subject. The total loss is estimated at about £4000 or £5000, and is partly well covered by insurance. The adjacent buildings—Rocks, the saddler, and Mackenzie, bookseller, on the one side, and the Union Bank on the other—had a very narrow escape from igniting; but, thanks to the plucky exertions of the firemen and the volunteers, who worked bravely, the further extension of the conflagration has been prevented.

RAILWAY MEETING AT WOLLONGONG.

[By Telegraph.]
(From our own correspondent.)

WOLLONGONG, Saturday.

An influential meeting, including representatives from the country districts, was held last night, presided over by Mr. F. A. Franklin, Mayor of the borough. The chairman, in clear and comprehensive terms, gave an account of the work done on the line, and as a professional man saw no difficulty in calling for tenders making Wollongong the starting point, and on one side to construct a line to Clifton, also one to Macquarie River on the south. No engineering difficulty existed on this portion. The tunnel at Clifton would be a very heavy undertaking, and the construction of the proposed section would facilitate the completion of the whole line, which, it had been conclusively proved, would pay from the commencement. The following resolutions were unanimously passed:—"That the delay in calling for tenders for the construction of the railway into Illawarra, in accordance with the vote of Parliament passed two years ago, is a most serious drawback to the South Coast districts, retarding, as it does, its general progress." "That, considering the great advantage a speedy completion of the railway would be to Illawarra, it is desirable to urge Government as forcibly as possible to call for tenders for the construction of the line from Stanwell Point to Wollongong and Macquarie River, pending the completion of the protracted survey between the end of the present railway contract and Stanwell Park." "That the substance of foregoing resolutions be embodied in a memorial to be presented to the Minister for Works." An influential deputation, including the member for the district, Sir John Hay, and Sir Wigram Allen, was appointed to present the memorial, and urge its prayer.

MURDER OF A CHINESE DOCTOR AT ARMIDALE.

[By Telegraph.]
(From our own correspondent.)

ARMIDALE, Saturday.

Jimmy Young, an intelligent and inoffensive Chinaman, well known as the "Chinese doctor," having a considerable practice among his countrymen, was found this morning in the Armidale creek in the middle of the town, brutally murdered, having his head nearly chopped off. The sum of £16 was found on him. It is surmised that he had been at the camp of a lot of Chinese gardeners close by the previous night, gambling, and having won largely was murdered [illegible] house.

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

HAWKESBURY RACE CLUB AUTUMN MEETING.

Second Day.—March 17.

Chairman, Benjamin Richards; judge, Andrew Town; starter, Robert Richards; handicapper, J. A. Scarr; clerk of the course, T. Richardson; secretary, C. S. Guest.

The Hawkesbury Race Club were again favoured with fine weather for the second and concluding day of their meeting, though the temperature was somewhat oppressive. The attendance was not as good as it ought to have been, and the number of persons present did not exceed 2000. The grand stand and lawn were, however, well patronised, and there was a fair sprinkling of ladies. Three special trains ran from Sydney, as on Thursday, and took up a large number of visitors, among whom the bookmaking fraternity were well represented. The railway arrangements going and returning were excellent, and good time was observed. If the club desire to gain credit for enterprise at a very small expenditure they might accomplish this by offering better facilities to enable the public to reach the course. At present the entrance gate is so narrow that a considerable amount of piloting is necessary to get between the posts, and on Saturday a deadlock occurred whenever any of the heavy weights essayed the task. With the exception of the Shorts Handicap, Mr. Richards was again successful with the flag, and the general arrangements were satisfactory.

A large field went to the post for the Shorts Handicap, and on the strength of the form shown on the previous day, Kaiapara, the speedy-looking daughter of Goldsbrough and Maritana, was made first favourite, but the start left nothing in it but Kingsdale, who, jumping off in front, made all the running and won cleverly, but although he carried his colours to the front he is far from being the colt he was in the spring, and one of his knees has a very suspicious appearance. All sorts of odds were laid on Aberfoyle for the Maiden Plate, and he won very easily from Fandango, who had made a lot of running, and ran more kindly than usual. Out of the large number of horses that were nominated for the Autumn Handicap only a poor field of seven faced the flag, and with his Australian Cup running still fresh in the memory of the public, Willeroo was backed at 5 to 4, while Soldier Boy having done a satisfactory trial since his return was well supported at 3 to 1. Soldier Boy looked well, but Willeroo had a tucked-up appearance, and did not show anything like the muscle he did at the V. R. C. Meeting, and he looked jaded after his journey. Royal Blend cut out the work till half a mile from home, when Ad Valorem and Willeroo closed upon him, and the victory of the favourite was loudly proclaimed, but he was outpaced from the distance home, and the Clarence River colt won with plenty to spare at the end. Writing of the Autumn Handicap in the Sydney Mail of the 10th February, "Nemo" remarked:—"The Clarence River colt, Ad Valorem, has exactly the same weight that he carried to the front in the Flying Handicap at the late Sydney Turf Club Anniversary Meeting, when he cut out the three-quarters of a mile like a workman in 1.17½. On that occasion he came home full of running, and as he belongs to the improving sort I cannot but regard him as being just about the most dangerous horse in the handicap." And he wound up the article thus:—"And on paper the winner appears to be amongst the following half-score: Ad Valorem, Hesperian, Silver Arrow, Bandmaster, Cunnamulla, Sardonyx, Morpeth, Willeroo, Balmoral, and Soldier Boy." So that with starts the first three horses were correctly placed. Ad Valorem was bred by Messrs. Barnes and Smith, and is by Captivator from Azalia, by Kelpie from Amber (the grand dam of Dagworth), by Glaucus (Arab) from Splendora (imported). It was without doubt the worst field that has started for a big handicap of late years, and, considering the state of the course, the time was only fairly good. Notwithstanding his indifferent running in the shorts, Bob Sawyer was nearly as good a favourite as Loiter for the Selling Plate, but he melted away in the last 20 strides, and Loiter, a more than useful looking gelding, by Saunterer (a brother to Maribyrnong) from a mare by Paul Pry, won a well-contested race for Tom Brown, and was afterwards bought in for 100 guineas. The Sportsman's Handicap attracted but a poor lot, and Raven appeared to be the best of them; but he made his effort rather late, and finished third to The Bean and the highly-bred and high-priced Gloucester. The Bean, though somewhat small, is a perfect picture of a racehorse, and he loses nothing by being by Fève (Arab) from Camilla, the dam of the cast-iron Black Eagle. The following is an account of each race:—

Mr. J. Stewart's b h Kingsdale, by Maribyrnong—Rosedale, 3 years, 7st. 12lb. (Gainsforth)	1
Mr. F. L. Baker's br f Morceau, by Maribyrnong—Scraps, 3 years, 7st. 10lb. (Gorman)	2

Mr. H. M. Herbertson's ch f Sunbeam, 3 years, 6st. 2lb. (Kelso)	0

Betting: 3 to 1 v. Kaiapara, 4 to 1 v. Kingsdale, 5 to 1 v. Bob Sawyer, 6 to 10 to 1 v. any other.

After considerable delay the word was given to a bad start, Kingsdale jumping off with a two or three lengths' lead of Bob Sawyer, while Jack of Clubs, Una, and Malta lost a lot of ground. Making the most of his advantage Kingsdale led round the far corner by three lengths, Bob Sawyer, Vestal, Venice, and Morceau showing at the head of the others, with Kaiapara in the centre of the ruck. Kingsdale entered the straight attended by Vestal, Morceau, Kaiapara, and Bob Sawyer, but the latter soon retired and so did Vestal, leaving Morceau and Kaiapara to follow the leader up the straight. They looked like closing on him at the distance, but by a final effort he shook them off and defeated Morceau by a length, while Kaiapara was scarcely so far behind the Daughter of Scraps. Venice was a pretty good fourth, and was followed by Vestal, Bob Sawyer, and Inverary. Time, 1 minute 17 seconds.

Maiden Plate, a handicap of 5 sovs. each for starters only, with 100 sovs. added, for all maiden horses at time of entrance. Penalties for winning after entrance: once, 5lb.; twice or more, 7lb. Second horse, 15 sovs.; third horse five sovs. from the prize. 1¼ miles.

Hon. J. White's br c Aberfoyle, by Maribyrnong—The Alpaca, 2 years, 6st. 8lb. (Williamson)	1
Mr. T. Lamond's br c Fandango, by Hawthornden—Espagnolle, 3 years, 8st. 4lb. (Hughes)	2
Mr. W. E. Royd's br c The Prior, by Yattendon—The Novice 2 years, 6st. 8lb. (Nicholson)	3
Mr. A. F. Smart's b c Delos, 2 years, 6st. 8lb. (Gough)	0

Betting: 3 to 1 on Aberfoyle, 4 to 1 v. Fandango.

Aberfoyle was the first to move, but Fandango soon ran to the front, and forcing the pace led along the back of the course by five lengths, the favourite next, pulling hard, a couple of lengths in front of the other two. Fandango led into the straight, but Aberfoyle caught him at the distance and defeated him easily by two lengths. The Prior was four lengths off third, and Delos finished about the same distance from him. Time, 2 minutes 13¼ seconds.

The Hawkesbury Autumn Handicap, a handicap sweepstakes of £10 sovs. each, with 300 sovs. added. The winner to receive 75 per cent., second horse 15 per cent., and third horse 10 per cent. of the gross amount. The winner of any handicap race of the value of 100 sovs. after the declaration of weights to carry 3lb. extra; of any such race of the value of 200 sovs., 5lb. extra; of any such race of the value of 300 sovs., 7lb. extra. 1¾ mile.

Mr. S. W. Knight's b c Ad Valorem, by Captivator—Azalia, 3 years, 7st. (Williamson)	1
Mr. J. Monaghan's br h Sardonyx, by Fireworks—Onyx, 4 years, 8st. 8lb. (Colley)	2
Mr. W. Kelso's b g Willeroo, by Zetland, 4 years, 8st. 4lb. (Nicholson)	3

Mr. R. Skuthorpe's b h Royal Blend, aged, 6st. 6lb. (Phipps)	0

Betting: 5 to 4 v. Willeroo; 3 to 1 v. Soldier Boy; 5 to 1 v. Ad Valorem; 6 to 1 v. Sardonyx; 7 to 1 v. Balmoral; 25 to 1 v. Pell Mell.

Proceedings were commenced by a capital start, Royal Blend and Willeroo getting best off, and the first-named led Soldier Boy three lengths past the stand, Balmoral and Willeroo following closely. Carrying on the running, Royal Blend had four lengths advantage of Soldier Boy when passing the old mile post, where Balmoral was third, a couple of lengths away, closely attended by Willeroo, Ad Valorem, and Sardonyx, while Pell Mell's condition had already told against him. Willeroo then joined Soldier Boy, and the pair were within a couple of lengths of the leader as they sailed along the back of the course, with the others, except Pell Mell, on terms, two lengths away. As they made for the far corner Ad Valorem joined Willeroo and Soldier Boy, and the three racing in a cluster reached the leader's girths. Royal Blend soon got into trouble, and Sardonyx drawing upon his horses, the six came round the bend in very close company, Willeroo's head just showing in front of Ad Valorem, while Sardonyx began to come in earnest. Willeroo—who had been pulled about a good deal at the back of the course—just led Ad Valorem into the straight; but the latter was not half done with, and challenging the favourite resolutely at the distance cut him down and shot to the front. Sardonyx then put in his claim, and the favourite being unable to answer a final call he fell back third, leaving Sardonyx to chase Ad Valorem; but the effort was fruitless, and the son of Captivator holding his own, won comfortably by nearly two lengths. Willeroo was about the same distance from Sardonyx, and four lengths from the defeated favourite came Royal Blend, three lengths in front of the others. Time, 2 minutes 39½ seconds.

Mr. R. Hack's blk c Escamillo (late Buildog), 3 years, 6st. 1lb. (Kelso)	0

Betting: 2 to 1 v. Loiter, 5 to 2 v. Bob Sawyer, 4 to 10 to 1 v. any other.

A good start sent Escamillo away, attended by Bob Sawyer and Vestal, with the others on good terms. Bob Sawyer went up to the leader at the far corner, and the pair led the field two lengths round the home turn. A capital race took place all the way up the straight, and Loiter, dashing to the front in the last few strides, defeated Prima Donna and Bob Sawyer by a head and neck respectively, and after them came Escamillo, and Rosinante, while Una was last. Time, 1 minute 17¼ seconds.

The Sportsman's Handicap, a handicap of 100 sovs.; second horse 10 sovs. from the prize. The winner of the Hawkesbury Handicap to carry 5lb. 1 mile and 3 furlongs.

Betting: 6 to 4 v. Raven; 3 to 1 v. Brian Boru; 5 to 1 v. Royal Blend and Gloucester; 8 to 10 to 1 v. any other.

Brian Boru and The Bean got the best of a very good start, and the former led round the turn and along the far side of the course, followed by Gloucester and Raven, and, Brian Boru tiring under the weight when half a mile from home, Gloucester and The Bean took up the running, attended by Raven. The trio entered the straight on close terms, and a fine race all the way home ended in favour of The Bean by a short neck, while Raven was only half a length away, and Brian Boru was a pretty fair fourth. Time, 2 minutes 27½ seconds.

The general settling over the Hawkesbury meeting is to take place at Tattersall's this evening. The following are the prices offering on the Sydney Cup: 6 to 1 each v. Sweet William and Stockwell, 8 to 1 each v. Mistaken and Ad Valorem, 10 to 1 v. Willeroo, and from 12 to 25 to 1 v. any other.

The right to the racecourse properties for the ensuing A. J. C. Autumn Meeting is to be disposed of to-day by Mr. Kiss, at his Bazaar, Pitt-street.

WOOLLOOMOOLOO BAY REGATTA.

The Woolloomooloo Bay Amateur Regatta, which was the fourth of the series known as afternoon regattas, took place on Saturday, and was witnessed by a large number of persons. The Alathea, which was engaged as flagship, was largely patronised, and spectators also congregated on the western shores of the bay and down as far as Mrs. Macquarie's chair. Adjacent ships were made gay with bunting, and here and there the shores were brightened by displays of the same material. Fine weather prevailed, and the wind was just what those who engage in aquatic pastimes appreciate, not too powerful to prevent comfortable rowing, or too wild to preclude sailing crafts from dashing merrily through the water. To the enjoyment of the weather was added the strains of the Mercantile Band, who were stationed on board the flagship. There were 13 events on the programme, but only 12 were contested, as the anticipated competitors for the yacht prizes did not put in an appearance. The prizes were valued at £105, and consisted of trophies and money. In connection with the sailing races there were upwards of 30 competitors, whose craft of various sizes, as they tacked or ran before the wind, gave the harbour quite an animated appearance. There were also a handicap for all comers and a race for men-of-war boats, the latter of which proved the most exciting and interesting of the afternoon. The starting gun was fired by lads belonging to H.M.C.S. Wolverene. The starters were Messrs. Fred Thomas and R. Oatley, the umpires, Messrs. W. Smyth and J. R. Drewett, and the judges Messrs. H. Scarr and Francis Punch, all of whom fulfilled their duties in the most satisfactory manner. Mr. John E. Myers acted efficiently as secretary. Below are the events and the names of the winners:—

Half-decked Boats, handicapped, crew limited to five hands. Course: From Woolloomooloo Bay, round Fort Denison, round lightship and Sow and Pigs, round flagship, round Fort Denison and Shark Island (outside buoys), and back to flagship. Prizes, £5 and £2. Buttercup, 3 minutes, 1; Thisbe, scratch, 2; Ethel, scratch, 3; Waterlily, 8 minutes, 0; Coryphene, 6 minutes, 0.

Maiden scullers, members of rowing clubs, rowing two pairs sculls in club skiffs. Course: From Cowper Wharf, round Fort Denison, and back to flagship. Prize, £4 4s. Katie, H. Juliff and O. Seale, 1; G. R. C., C. Birchall and R. P. Smith; S. R. C., P. H. Sullivan and F. W. Sharp. O'Sullivan and Sharp were the first to get way, and as far as the Corporation Baths they were enabled to maintain a lead, when Juliff and Seale, who were showing better form than them, passed them. Shortly afterwards Juliff and Seale assumed a lead of a couple of lengths, and O'Sullivan and Sharp were ahead of Birchall and Smith a length and a-quarter. Towards the fort the leading boat improved its position, and a good race ensued between the second and third boats. Rounding the fort Juliff and Seale led by six lengths, and O'Sullivan and Sharp were about a length and a-half in advance of Birchall and Smith, and during the race home the relative position of the boats remained unchanged, but the gaps between them were extended. Juliff and Seale won easily by 20 lengths.

Open Boats, 20 feet and upwards, not less than 6 feet beam; crew not to exceed five hands. Course: From Woolloomooloo Bay, round Fort Denison, round lightship and Sow and Pigs, round flagship, round Fort Denison and Clark Island, and back to flagship. First prize, £5; second, £2. Minx, 6 minutes, 1; Uranus, scratch, 2; Tempest, 1 minute, 3; Surprise, 1 minute, 0; Edith, 4 minutes, 0; Lily, 5 minutes, 0.

Twenty-four feet open-boats, crew limited to 6 hands. Course. Same as No. 2. First prize, £5; second, £2. Adelphi, M. A. H. Fitzhardinge, 2 minutes, 1; Meta, A. S. Huntley, 8 minutes, 2. For this there were six entries, but only two starters.

Twenty-two feet open-boats, best and best. Course: Same as No. 2. Mr. Patrick Punch's trophy, £10 10s. St. Crispin, 1; Rosetta, 2; Velox, 3.

Men-of-war's-men, rowing 5 oars in whaleboats, with coxswain. Course: From Cowper Wharf, round H.M.S. Nelson, round Fort Denison, and back to Flagship. Prize, £6; second, £2 2s. Entrance free. In this there were six competing boats, one each from the Wolverene, Renard, and Dart, and three from the Nelson, and the race was one of the most exciting in the programme; the boats being good ones, and the men, who were brawny and athletic, pulling with energy from start to finish. As far as Mrs. Macquarie's Chair the lot kept together, after which the Renard's boat stole away, and two of the Nelson's boats and that from the Dart pulled on equal terms. Rounding the fort the Renard's men led by a length and a-quarter, but were followed closely by two boats from the Nelson, after which came the Dart's boat two lengths away, and the Wolverene boat falling hopelessly into the rear. Coming home the Renard's boat got clear away, and won comfortably by four lengths, two boats from the Nelson being second and third respectively.

Sixteen-feet dingies. Course: From Woolloomooloo Bay, round Fort Denison and Shark Island, round Flagship, round Garden Island, and back to Flagship. Prize, £4 4s.; second, Messrs. Feldheim, Gotthelf and Co.'s trophy, £3 3s. Euthella, 1; Ouida, 2; Sophia, 3; Daisy, 0; Regina, 0.

Fourteen-feet Dingies. Course: From flagship round Fort Denison, Clark Island, and back to flagship. Prize, Messrs. John Keep and Son's trophy, £3 10s.; second prize, £1. Young Victor, 1; Young Jim, 2; Alice, 3.

Senior Scullers (members of rowing clubs, rowing two pair sculls, in club skiffs). Course: From Cowper Wharf round Fort Denison and Garden Island, and back to flagship. Prize, £5; second, £2. C. Williams and G. Seale, 1; F. Ives and S. H. Martin, 2; W. Johnson and W. F. Kloster, 0; F. Bull and A. Ickerson, 0.

A very good start was effected, and Johnson and Kloster were the first to show in front. However, by a good display of rowing, Williams and Seale overhauled them off the Corporation Baths, Ives and Martin being a length astern at the time, while Bull and Ickerson and Thompson and Bros were rowing on equal terms. Rounding the fort, Williams and Seale were a length ahead of Johnson and Kloster, and three lengths away came Ives and Martin, having Thompson and Bros one and a half lengths, and Bull and Ickerson six lengths, astern of them. A grand race to the island ensued between the first and second boats, but on rounding the north-eastern point, that which promised to be an exciting struggle terminated by Johnson and Kloster running ashore, and Johnson losing his left scull overboard. Disabled, the men pulled pluckily still, but their mishap enabled Williams and Seale to easily maintain the good position they had attained for first place. After rounding the island the unfortunates were also passed by Ives and Martin, and this deprived them of all their chances. Eventually Williams and Seale came in winners by five lengths, Ives and Martin being second, with Johnson and Kloster a short time behind them. Thompson and Bros gave up half a dozen lengths away, and Bull and Ickerson were last.

Canvas dingies. Time allowance, 1½ minute a foot. Course: Same as No. 9. Prize, American Novelty Company's trophy, £3 3s.; second, £1 10s.; third, £1. Maggie, 1; Latona, 2; Estelle, 3.

Youths not exceeding 18, rowing two pair sculls, in light skiffs. Course same as No. 3. First prize, Evening News special prize, £5; second, £2. J. Yates and F. Killigrew, 1; J. Chate and J. Nicols, 2.

All Comers, in light skiffs, handicapped. Course: From Cowper Wharf round Fort Denison, and buoy off Rushcutter Bay and back to flagship. Prize, £10; second £3. Entrance, 10s. W. Beach, 45lb., 1; G. Solomon, 20lb., 2; G. Gilford, 15lb.; H. Jenkins, feather; A. Martin, feather; J. M'Clerkin, 10lb.

M'Clerkin got away with a lead, Jenkins being second, and then succeeded a good race as far as Mrs. Macquarie's Chair. Here M'Clerkin led by a length, but Beach had got into second place, and by a similar distance separated himself from Solomon, who was on equal terms with Jenkins, while Gilford was six lengths away. Towards the fort Beach took first place, but rounding it M'Clerkin overhauled and led him by one and a quarter lengths. Solomon was one and a half. Jenkins four, and Gilford ten lengths away. Having passed the fort Beach again headed the procession, and it was seen that he had the race well in hand. Passing the island he led by three lengths, and M'Clerkin and Solomon were level, Jenkins being six lengths astern, and Gilford last, and out of it. Beach rounded the buoy in Rushcutter Bay with a lead of two lengths, and then also Solomon managed to secure second position, and obtain from M'Clerkin an advantage of three lengths; Jenkins losing a considerable distance by fouling the buoy. At the finish Beach won easily by three lengths, Solomon being second four lengths in advance of M'Clerkin, while the others were four or five lengths away.

BALMAIN ANNUAL REGATTA.

The first annual regatta in connection with the Balmain Rowing Club was held on Saturday afternoon. It is not many months since this young club opened its fine boatshed, since which time members have been rapidly enrolled. The boatshed was opened on a fine bright afternoon, and the good fortune thus augured appears to be well advanced in progress to fulfilment. With good oarsmen, good boats, and a splendid stretch of water in front of the shed, it only remained that good weather also should prevail to make the occasion of the first annual regatta a success. This one remaining factor to that success was not wanting. The afternoon was excellently fine, and the interest taken in the club was manifested by the many yachts and pleasure boats dotting the water, the groups of spectators on the rocks, and the crowded state of the steamer. The boatshed was made gay with lines of flags, from the highest point floating the club colours, amber and black. At about half-past 2 o'clock the steamer Promise, which had been chartered as the flagship, left Sydney with a large complement of passengers. At the course Captain Rountree and Mr. A. Milne had placed their steam launches at the disposal of the club. From the one launch the judge, Dr. O. S. Evans, jun., attended to his duties; and the other was used by the umpire and starter—Mr. W. R. Ainsworth, who acted in these capacities in the absence of Mr. S. H. Hyam. The Balmain Coldstream Brass Band played a number of waltzes and other musical selections on board the steamer Promise. It was unfortunate that the Balmain Rowing Club Regatta clashed with the regatta at Woolloomooloo Bay, but as the date of the former had been fixed previous to that of the latter being determined, it was decided not to alter it. The number of the entries was, as might of course be expected at the first regatta of a club, but few; and this also was the case in the number of events, five only being upon the programme, one of which—the race between scratch fours—had to be postponed on account of the delay caused in starting the preceding races.

It was not till long past the hour announced for starting the first event that the competitors came to scratch and were sent away by the starter. This race was for maiden single sculls in skiffs, the prizes being trophies presented by Messrs. Mason Brothers, and Fieldheim, Gotthelf, and Co. The course originally determined upon was from Fletcher's Point, round Shark Island, and back to the shed, but it was wisely resolved to make it a straight pull, and so the course was altered to from Fletcher's Point to Figtree Point. Four competitors, J. H. Read, J. Milham, J. Nash, and E. Lane, started in the race, which was unhappily marred by two fouls not far distant from the starting point. A fair start having been effected, about 10 lengths had been passed when Read and Milham fouled, the former who had the outside position and lots of sea room in which to give his fellow-rowers a wide berth, being apparently to blame. Milham stopped, backed a couple of strokes, and held up his hand in protest, which afterwards was we believe decided in his favour. However, if he won the protest he lost the race, for had he not delayed it is probable that, barring accidents, and rowing as well as he afterwards did, he would have secured the foremost position. The delay, however, put him out of the race, and if he had a "show" at all it was marred by his coming into collision near finish of the race with a pleasure boat. Read got away and followed Lane and Nash, who soon after also came into collision, the former, who throughout the race steered in a very erratic manner, being apparently the man to blame. Lane got away first, and tried hard to hold the premier place; but Nash, followed by Read, came up on him, and won by about a length and a half to two lengths, with Read second. No official time was taken, but the race was necessarily a slow one, on account of the interruptions stated. Nash and Read, by some error, passed the judge's boat on the wrong side of the flag, but this was not counted a disqualification.

The second race was between maiden fours in stringtest gigs. The prize was a trophy. Two crews started, T. F. Walker stroking (1), with T. Abbott (3), E. Lane (2), and D. Smith (bow), and W. Langley stroking the other, with J. Langley (3), J. Chubb (2), and F. J. Smith (bow). The course was from Long Nose Point to the boatshed, a distance of a mile and a half to two miles. The race needs little description, Walker's crew soon after the start taking the lead, and winning by a clear two lengths, the time being good.

The third race was between maiden double sculls in skiffs, the prizes being trophies presented by Messrs. T. R. Allt and Dr. Evans. The entries were A. G. Kebblewhite and C. Read, J. Nash and J. H. Read, J. Milham and R. Aikenhead, W. H. Jackson and G. Archibald. The race lay between J. Milham with R. Aikenhead and J. Nash with J. H. Read, the former pair showing the better form. W. H. Jackson and G. Archibald were close up on Nash and his companion. This was the best race of the day, the three pairs mentioned keeping close together. Milham and Aikenhead, however, proved too good for their opponents, winning by two lengths with Nash and Read second. The course was the same as in the first race.

The fourth race, junior single sculls in skiffs, brought out but two competitors—A. Fraser and J. Langley—the course being the same as in the preceding race. For three-fourths of the distance the two men pulled almost abreast of each other, when Langley, who was pulling a neater and better stroke than his opponent, went to the front and won by about two lengths.

The hour being near 6 o'clock, it was determined not to row the last race on the programme, and the band having played the National Anthem, the steamer returned with its load of passengers to Sydney, and the regatta terminated.

PEDESTRIANISM—THE SIX DAYS' WALK.

The six days' pedestrian contest in the Exhibition Building for £200 a-side, between O'Leary, the champion walker of America, and Edwards, the champion long distance walker of Australia, was brought to a termination on Saturday, in the presence of several thousand persons, Edwards winning easily by 23 miles. When O'Leary allowed Edwards to make over 100 miles in the first 24 hours, and then increase the lead to 20 miles at the end of the second day, it was thought that he merely allowed Edwards to go ahead, and that he would overtake him as the end of the week approached. From a statement made by O'Leary's trainer, it appears that he was seized with illness on the first day which he could not succeed in throwing off during the match. He struggled gamely, but had to retire from the track so often that Edwards had ample time to take things easy and reserve all his strength in case O'Leary would attempt to force the pace on the two last days. When the end of the fifth day was approaching, Edwards (who knew nothing of O'Leary's indisposition) expected the American champion to make an effort; as no effort was made by O'Leary to decrease the distance on Saturday morning, Edwards felt that he was the winner, and that O'Leary was not himself. By mutual consent the match was brought to a close at a quarter to 11 o'clock. Shortly before that time the rival pedestrians indulged in some fast spurts, to the great delight of the crowd, some of whom gave vent to their enthusiasm by yelling in the most fiendish fashion. Edwards made several unsuccessful efforts to pass O'Leary, and at last he succeeded in doing so, and in nearly overlapping him in a very short space of time. The distance done in the 142¾ hours by Edwards and O'Leary respectively were 373 miles and 350 miles. The distance traversed by the contestants falls a long way below expectations, and the backers of either man would have wagered at the start that at least 450 miles would have been recorded by the winning man in six days. In nearly all his six days' matches, O'Leary has strided over 500 miles. At the conclusion of the walk, Mr. F. D. Hamilton of Melbourne, the stakeholder in the match, addressed those present, and stated that O'Leary had been unwell during the whole of the contest, and though he had been defeated, there were some friends of the American champion in Sydney, who would back him to walk Edwards again over the same distance. Edwards, who then appeared, thanked the public for the liberal manner in which they had patronised the match, and regretted that it had not been a closer affair. As a refutation of the injury which it is alleged the system sustains through these long distance walking matches, Edwards offered to submit himself at once for examination at the hands of any medical man who might be present, and to illustrate that he had not suffered loss of physical power through his exertions he was prepared to walk any man in Sydney for 24 hours within seven days time. Before retiring Edwards expressed his regret at O'Leary's indisposition. O'Leary then briefly returned thanks for the sympathy which had been expressed for him. Though there was a plentiful display of green ribbon among the spectators, three hearty cheers were given for the Queen, and notwithstanding the manifestations of loyalty and the fact that the Head Quarters Band played the National Anthem twice in about a quarter of an hour, no disorder occurred. The stakes will be paid over at Hunt's Oxford Hotel on Wednesday night, when probably another match will be arranged.

CRICKET.

Two elevens from the Tramway branch, Randwick, against Pitt-street, played a one-innings game at Moore Park on Saturday afternoon last; the latter scoring 49, and the former putting together 75; the Randwickians won by 26 runs. For the Pitt-street branch Toby was top with 14, while T. Ironside, Magner, Stacey, and Madigan—with 14, 14, 18, and 12 respectively—secured similar honours for the Randwickians.

The Carltons first and 13 of the Orientals played a one-innings match on Saturday afternoon on the Domain. The Carltons went to the wickets first, and put together the small total of 85, 30 of which were contributed by P. Marr. The Orientals at the fall of their fifth wicket, topped their opponents' score by six, scoring 91 very quickly, thus winning the match by seven wickets and six runs. Leland was top scorer for the Orientals with 47.

The University Oval was the scene of another contest between the 2nd Warwicks and 2nd Carltons on Saturday last, the Warwicks obtaining another victory by 3 wickets and 2 runs. For the winners W. Gannon and A. Ogilvy played very well for 28 and 20 not out respectively, while for the losers Lynch (21), Mitchelson (20), and Martin (12) were the chief contributors, each obtaining their runs by very good cricket. Harpur and Austin bowled well for Warwick, the former obtaining 3 wickets for 1 run, and the latter 4 for 10.

On Saturday the Highland Union C. C. defeated the Inconstant C. C., on Moore Park, by 5 runs. The principal scorers on the winning side were Messrs. Gedde and Ferguson, the former scoring 10, and the latter 10 (not out). Messrs. C. and E. Slater were in great form with the ball. The principal scorer on the losing side was Toran, who scored 14.

AMATEUR STEEPLECHASE.

Rosewood	1
Barcoo	2
Chanak	3

Our Melbourne correspondent wires some particulars of the races run at Koroit on Saturday. Three horses started for the Steeplechase; two of them baulked at the first fence, and the third at the second. After half an hour vainly spent in trying to force them one horse took the jump, but refused the next until the top rail had been removed. A similar delay took place at the fourth fence. Then the exasperated rider beat his horse so cruelly that the animal was removed from the course, and the police intend prosecuting.

THE BOURKE DISTRICT.

[By Telegraph.]
(From our own correspondent.)

BOURKE, Saturday.

A report has just been received that a good supply of fresh water has been struck by the Government boring party, in charge of Mr. Ford, on the direct road from Bourke to Wanaaring, Paroo River. The bore is down about 80 feet, close to Goonery, about 20 miles west of the Warrego River. The road is good. Up to the present the bore which has been here and at Warrego passed through several layers of water, drift, &c. The water is slightly brackish by the last report.

The weather is fine and warm, but is looking like a change again.

The Darling River is high, and is still rising slowly. At Walgett the Barwon is up 31 feet, and is stationary. The Namoi at the same place is up 5 feet, and is falling. At Mogil the river is up 7 feet, and is falling. At Mungindi the river is up 7 feet, and is falling. At Brewarrina the river Darling is up 21 feet, and is stationary. At Goodooga the river is up 4 feet, and is stationary.

FLOOD IN THE PAROO.

[By Telegraph.]
(From our own correspondent.)

WILCANNIA, Saturday.

There has been a great flood in the Paroo. The river on this side of Hungerford overflowed its banks, and is now many miles wide. The mail due here on Tuesday only arrived late last night, owing to its detention by the flood. The water commenced slowly to subside yesterday, but it is reported that there is a flood behind. The Darling is up 16 feet here, and is still rising; and although it will not be much affected by the Paroo, the large body of water coming from the M'Intyre and Barwon Rivers will make navigation from here to the Murray practicable for six weeks yet at least.

AMUSEMENTS.

Mr. Sheridan's performance of "Hamlet" attracted a large audience to the Gaiety Theatre on Saturday evening. This, in face of the fact that prevailing taste leans more to the glitter and tinkle of modern sensational plays, was a gratifying tribute to the genuine merit of Mr. Sheridan's performance. His interpretation of the character was full of significance, each passage—so pregnant of meaning—carrying its full force to the hearer's mind.

At the Opera House "The Strategist" was once more repeated, and caused as much hearty laughter as on any previous occasion. Mrs. Polk's song "The pretty girl milking her cow," the air of which is one familiar to all lovers of Irish melody, was appropriately introduced, and elicited warm applause.

At the Theatre Royal, "Henry V." drew a large attendance, the many brilliant tableaux depicting the triumph of brave King Harry being warmly applauded.

At the Academy of Music, "The Hibernica" entertainment was given for the first time, a large audience being present. The entertainment is intended to describe a trip taken by a party of American tourists through Ireland, their progress being illustrated by a number of panoramic views of the cities and places of interest they visit. The adventures and episodes in the tour are described by a number of characters. Mr. Shaw Cross acted the principal of the tourists, Mr. C. P. Doolittle; Miss Vesta Amor, who has a most attractive voice, which she uses well, taking the part of his sister, Miss Charlotte Doolittle. Miss Amor possesses a powerful voice, and her singing of a number of songs, introduced throughout the entertainment, won the applause of the audience. Mr. J. Cowan was amusing as Julius J. F. Cuffee, a negro servant; and Mr. T. Buckley made a droll Irish guide—one Barney O'Neil. Miss May Vivian played the part of Mollie O'Connor, the belle of Killarney, with success, and Messrs. R. Watson and W. Carle, the former as Abe Lillywhite, an hotel servant, and the latter as the landlord of an hotel bearing the romantic title of the "Pig and Whistle," filled their parts satisfactorily. The large and varied display of gifts on the platform excited the hopes of many present to be a fortunate recipient. The entertainment throughout was well received, and no doubt will continue to draw large attendances.

On Wednesday evening a conversazione will be held in the Sydney Mechanics' School of Arts in celebration of the jubilee of the institution.

ALL USE IT. IT IS AT EVERY PICNIC, IT IS IN EVERY KITCHEN.
It obtained the Gold Medal at the New Zealand Exhibition, and the Silver Medal at the Perth Exhibition.
It gives the finish to every dish, for gravies, soups, game, fish, or cold meats. It assists digestion, and increases the appetite. It has a place at Government House, and is seen at every respectable artizan's. The protectionists use it because it is colonial, the free-trader because it is cheap. It is the especial favourite with all classes because, as one of the Sydney clergymen wrote, "It is the best yet made." It is the AUSTRALIAN RELISH, made by WASHINGTON H. SOUL, 221, PITT-STREET, and sold by every storekeeper. Price, one shilling.

THE GOLD MEDAL of the New Zealand Exhibition was awarded to WASHINGTON H. SOUL for his Culinary and Pharmaceutical Preparations, in full competition with all the various European and colonial productions, and
THE SILVER MEDAL of the Perth Exhibition was also awarded to him for the only article he exhibited there, viz., the AUSTRALIAN RELISH
